New Program For Farmers To Cost U. S. $1,000,000,000

President and Advisers Reported Agreed on Substitute AAA.

'Moral Obligation' Now $237,000,000

Administration Strategy Changed to Meet New Conditions.

The President, his advisers and Congressional leaders yesterday in a White House conference put the finishing touches on a farm program which will cost the United States approximately one billion dollars.

No suggestion was made of means by which this money will be raised.

The program embraced these items:

1. An expenditure of $500,000,000 to carry out new legislation expanding the soil conservation act of 1935 to the breadth necessary to conduct a national farm program, a bill to be introduced by Senator John H. Bankhead, Alabama Democrat. Representative Marvin Jones, Texas Democrat, will introduce a somewhat similar bill in the House.

Contract Fulfillment.

2. The sum of $237,000,000, to fulfill the Government's "moral obligation" to farmers who signed 1935 AAA contracts in good faith, recommended by Chester C. Davis, AAA administrator, as an Administration substitute for the $300,000,000 appropriation asked by Senator Charles L. McNary, Oregon Republican.

3. Approximately $200,000,000, in impounded processing taxes, held in lower courts, whose return Attorney General Homer Cummings indicated will be unopposed as he sent out instructions to withdraw all objections lodged in lower Federal courts against the return of these moneys to processors.

Administration strategy for swift legislation of the new farm program yesterday was changed at the last minute in order to meet powerful objections to the manner in which introduction was planned. The scheme in the Senate had been to hook a legislative rider containing the amendment expanding the soil conservation act to the independent offices appropriation bill, previously passed in the House.

Strong Opposition Seen.

This had met objections from a number of sources, with Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, pointing out that if a point of order were raised against this procedure, a two-thirds vote would be required to suspend the rules in order to let a legislative rider pass on an appropriations bill. Observers also saw strong opposition from Senator Ellison D. "Cotton Ed" Smith, South Carolina Democrat and chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, who is understood to favor more provision for cotton growers in the bill and also insists that such legislation must pass through his committee.

Yesterday Senator Bankhead revealed the new strategy, which would tack a $500,000,000 appropriation for the new farm program directly on the independent offices appropriation bill, with such an appropriation naturally germane to the bill and not subject to the other objections. Then the amendment expanding the soil act will go to the Senate Agriculture Committee, and if reported out shortly, be added then as a legislative rider to the independent offices appropriation, but still requiring a suspension of the rules. This split was probably decided on at the White House conference yesterday afternoon, analysts held.

Broadens Soil Act.

The bill to be introduced in the House and Senate, probably today, broadens the soil conservation act and provides domestic allotment features which empower the Secretary of Agriculture to make conditional grants to farmers who voluntarily comply with acreage reduction requirements.

After the White House conference, leaders announced the plan was drawn for two years, instead of one, as previously planned.

The conference, attended by Secretary Wallace, Attorney General Cummings, Chester C. Davis, Sen-

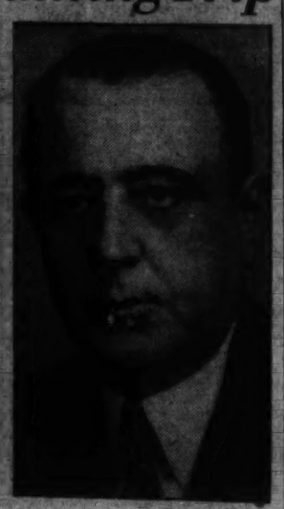
S. Clay Williams Shoots Friend on Hunting Trip

Associated Press WIREPHOTO. WILLIAM A. LAW.



Harris & Ewing. S. CLAY WILLIAMS.

William A. Law, Insurance Executive, Dies of Gun Wound in Leg Inflicted When Former Head of NRA Trips on Vines, Firing Weapon.

By the Associated Press.

Greensboro, N. C., Jan. 21.—William A. Law, of Philadelphia, president of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co., died in a hospital here early tonight of a wound he suffered when a shotgun in the hands of S. Clay Williams, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. executive and former NRA administrator, was accidentally discharged.

Law, Williams and A. L. Brooks, Greensboro attorney, were bird hunting near Siler City when the accident occurred about 3 p. m. today. The insurance company head was struck in the leg just below the knees. Physicians attributed death to loss of blood. He was 71.

Brooks said Williams' foot became entangled in a clump of honeysuckle, causing him to trip and accidentally discharge one shell in his gun. The load struck Law at a distance of 20 feet.

After being given emergency attention at Siler City, Law was placed in an ambulance and brought to Westly-Long Hospital here. He died within a few minutes after arriving.

The Penn Mutual president, a native of Spartanburg, S. C., had been at the Brushy Creek Hunting Club, on the land of which the accident occurred, since last Wednesday. He was joined Friday by Williams and Brooks. All were members of the club.

At Siler City, Willie Brower, a resident of the community who was acting as a guide for the hunting party, said the tobacco company official slipped as Law was preceding him over a narrow winding trail, and his gun was discharged as he fell forward.

On the way to Greensboro, Brooks said the wounded man sought to comfort Williams, urging him not to blame himself for "what was obviously an accident."

Williams was described by Brooks as being deeply distressed, even when it appeared that the wound might not be dangerous.

Lost Much Blood.

The Greensboro attorney said the party was hunting in a remote area of the club's reserve, when Law was shot, and that because of the lack of roads and the difficult terrain, it was almost two hours before the wounded man reached Siler City where a physician was called at once.

He bled a great deal, Brooks said, and was obviously weakened during the transfer. Because of his condition, it was deemed advisable to take him to Greensboro, 40 miles away, at once.

Williams served as chairman of the NRA for a time after Gen. Hugh Johnson resigned.

Siler City authorities, when informed tonight that Law had died, said it was not likely that an inquest would be held, since they were convinced the tragedy was the result of an accident.

Former Bankers' Head.

Philadelphia, Jan. 21 (AP).—William A. Law, head of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co. who was accidentally killed today in a hunting accident in North Carolina, was a former president of the American Bankers Association.

He was a director of the Fidelity Philadelphia Trust Co., the Reading Co., the Philadelphia Electric Co. and the Fire Association of Philadelphia.

He was born in Darlington, S. C., the son of a Presbyterian minister and descendant of an old Southern family.

For years, Law was president and chairman of the board of the First

Musicians Cry 'We Want Cash,' Delaying Opera

Refuse $1,500 Check as Senators and Diplomats Boo Union Men.

Scenes of disorder, hysteria and confusion echoed through Constitution Hall last night as 1,500 Washington music lovers—among them Government dignitaries, diplomats and society leaders—shouted a protest at the delayed opening of "Lakme," the first local offering of the National Opera Association.

The trouble started back stage when the local musicians' union refused to accept a check for $1,500, offered by Mrs. Edouard Albion, wife of the producer. The check was to pay musicians. They wanted cash and declined to enter the orchestra pit until cash was paid.

Manager Refuses Pleas.

Scheduled to begin at 8:15 p. m., the opera finally opened two hours later with the help of volunteers and a portable organ on the stage. A colorful crowd, most of them in tails, top hats and evening wraps, dwindled to less than half before the first note was sounded.

George Gaul, manager of the orchestra, was deaf to all pleas. He referred questions to Albert C. Hayden, president of the Musicians Protective Union, Local No. 161.

For nearly an hour, the dignified audience remained patient. The minutes dragged by. No explanation was forthcoming. Unrest spread from orchestra to gallery. Someone started to applaud. The clapping was soon taken up and the hall was filled with boos, hisses and rythmic beating of hands and feet.

Effort Applauded.

Backstage, Mrs. Albion frantically implored the "stand-pat" musicians. She became hysterical. Excitement spread rapidly through the opera cast. Actors and actresses in costume gathered around the producer's wife, asking questions.

Then, as a last resort, Mrs. Albion grabbed the $1,500 check and rushed on the stage. Those who had started to walk out waited to hear what she had to say.

"This is the most terrible thing that has ever happened in the history of music," Mrs. Albion began. "I have a check to pay the musicians. They won't take it. Won't some prominent Washingtonian please step forward and add his indorsement?"

As she spoke, her hair streamed across her eyes. Tears stained her cheeks. She waved the check aloft, pleading for someone in the audience to help. No one moved. There was scattered applause when she announced that she would re-

House Bloc Accepts Bond Bonus Plan

White House May Get Measure Tonight After Passage.

By Robert C. Albright.

House bonus leaders at a series of informal conferences yesterday decided to accept the Senate's "baby" bond substitute for their own cash payment bill, and place the completed measure on the White House doorstep tonight.

A tangled parliamentary situation left important obstacles in their path, but there was no doubt in the minds of leaders as to the final outcome. The only dubious question was that of a White House veto, in which event the bill must again run the gantlet of House and Senate.

Unanimous consent of the House will be required today for speedy concurrence in Senate changes, and Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee, plans to ask that consent when the House convenes at noon.

Single Objection.

A single objection can block that procedure, but bonus strategists were prepared for such an emergency. A special rule making bonus consideration immediately in order already has been prepared. If objection is made, the Rules Committee will report out the rule, enabling leaders to whip the Senate amendments through by a two-thirds vote.

An impending fight to force the inflation issue again to the fore by demanding issuance of new money against Treasury gold and silver stocks, to defray the bonus cost, was called off last night by the House silver block.

Previously, Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), of Texas, House bonus expansionist leader, had announced he would not press his inflationary method of paying the bonus.

Groups Agree on Issue.

Both groups, however, indicated they may later revive the issue when a $2,239,000,000 appropriation is sought to finance the new bond payment method. Conservative leaders discounted the effort, claiming an inflationary amendment would not be germane to an appropriation bill.

Success of today's maneuver to speed the bonus package immediately to President Roosevelt may depend on how Chairman Doughton phrases his unanimous consent request.

His motion will not be formally framed until further consultation with House parliamentarians today, but Doughton indicated last night he may ask for an hour's debate. On the other hand, should he ask simply that the House concur, and no member objects, the bonus fight would be over so far as Congress is concerned.

Members Anxious.

Members for the most part are anxious to get rid of the 17-year-old issue as rapidly as possible. It is no longer a partisan question, and leaders on both sides of the aisle said they knew of no plans to object to the Doughton proposal.

Speaker Byrns said he thought the issue would be disposed of in an hour and a half.

What the President will do with the bill when he gets it was a matter apparently known only to the President himself. At his press conference yesterday he again declined to answer any questions regarding the bonus. Some members of Congress were planning to urge that he let the bill become law without signing it.

Others recalled, however, that when a similar suggestion was made

Long Faction Piles Up Lead In Louisiana

Claims Primary 'Sweep;' Leche Is Leading Dear, 96,307 to 35,384.

By the United Press.

New Orleans, La., Jan. 21.—The Huey Long political machine held a commanding lead and claimed a "landslide victory" tonight in the first returns from Louisiana's tumultuous Democratic primary.

With one-fourth of the votes counted, most of them in the New Orleans area, Long candidates were leading nearly 3 to 1 over allies of Representative Cleveland Dear.

Only 256 of the State's 1,048 precincts had reported at 11 p. m.

Appellate Judge Richard W. Leche, the Long candidate for Governor, had 96,307 votes, against 35,384 for Dear.

[Returns from seven scattered country precints in today's primary gave Gov. O. K. Allen (Long) 228 votes and Frank Looney (anti-Long) 253 votes in the race for the unexpired term of the late Senator Huey Long, the Associated Press reported. Irving WardSteinman (Independent) had 3 votes.—Editor's note.]

Record Vote.

Other Long candidates were said to be leading in the same ratio, but tabulations were slow. The vote was the heaviest in history, estimated at nearly 500,000, and the tickets were lengthy.

Every elective office was contested by the men Long organized and installed in offices if his dictatorship, and the combined anti-Long elements who hoped to "restore home rule and give Louisiana a new deal in government."

The early returns included 240 of New Orleans' 262 precints. Here, Leche had 93,000 to Dear's 34,000. Two precints in suburban St. Bernard Parish, notorious gambling colony which thrives with protection of State officials, gave Leche 1,140 and Dear 18. Five precints in Alexandria, Dear's home town, gave Leche 700; Dear 100.

Only the two gubernatorial candidates, whose names headed their respective tickets, were counted. Since Long's assassination, country parishes have grown more concerned with local politics and they tabulated local offices first, waiting until nearly midnight to start counting returns in State offices.

Paper Concedes Victory.

The Long headquarters, in a New Orleans hotel, was the scene of a jubilant celebration starting about 10 p. m. The New Orleans Item, which supported Dear, virtually conceded victory to Leche.

Gov. O. K. Allen, titular head of the Long machine, said:

"This landslide is not entirely unexpected, but it is proof that the citizenry of Louisiana still are strongly back of Huey Long's policies."

Hugh Wilkinson, legal adviser to the Long forces, said:

"It is the greatest landslide in the history of Louisiana politics."

Dear headquarters was glum and silent. Its spokesmen reiterated charges of fraud and terrorism.

The city outwardly was quiet after widespread disorders during the voting. One Long precinct captain was shot and a Dear election official was beaten badly in a climax to daylong quarrels and fist-fighting.

Dear workers gathered notes on numerous cases of alleged fraud and corruption and planned to turn them over to Federal investigators employed by a Congressional committee. A Federal investigation of the primary was considered possible. Dear said he was denied representation at the polls in more than 20 of the 64 parishes. The Long machine ruled the polls and dictated

Four Washington Gangsters Indicted for Wilson Murder

By Frederic B. Tuttle,
A Staff Correspondent.

Rockville, Md., Jan. 21.—Four District gangsters, notorious in the underworlds of half a dozen Eastern cities, were indicted for the "mistaken identity" murder of Allen B. Wilson, newspaper route carrier, by a special grand jury in session at the courthouse here today.

At the same time the jury indicted the four men for conspiracy to slay Edward G. ("Mickey") McDonald, widely known in Washington as a gambler, before whose home in Takoma Park Wilson was shot to death October 23, 1934, as he stopped to deliver a morning paper.

The four who stand charged with the murder are Edward McDermott, alias John ("Slim") Dunn, now serving a term in Alcatraz Penitentiary, off the California coast; Albert S. Sutton, once a henchman of the late Eddie Killeen; William Cleary and Ernest Myers.

With the exception of McDermott, who will be brought from the island prison as soon as possible, all those indicted are prisoners in the District Jail.

Moving swiftly, the grand jury also indicted Dewey Jenkins, a minor member of the once dreaded, now defunct, Tri-State Gang, which shot and robbed a bloody pathway up and down the Eastern seaboard.

Jenkins is named in the indictment for conspiring to murder McDonald in a gamblers' feud, which culminated when guns blazed from back of a hedge in front of McDonald's home October 23, 1934, and Wilson fell, the innocent victim.

Jenkins' indictment, it was understood today, was returned so he may be held as a witness for the State when the others come to trial. He is reputed to have made a confession implicating the four Washington gunmen in the murder of Wilson.

The indictments and counts returned by the special venire today are:

1. For the murder of Wilson—McDermott, Cleary, Sutton and Dunn. A second count in the murder indictment charged Sutton with being an accessory before the fact, as he was seen in Takoma Park September 25, 1934.

2. For carrying concealed weapons and attempting to inflict bodily harm to McDonald: Dunn, Cleary, Myers and Dewey Jenkins.

3. For attempting to kill McDonald by placing a large quantity of dynamite in his automobile October 2, 1934: Sutton, Dunn, Cleary and Myers.

4. For conspiring to murder

5 Found Dead, Crews Dig On In Hope of Saving One Miner

By the Associated Press.

Louisville, Colo., Jan. 21.—Weary rescuers, buoyed by hope that one man remained alive, pushed deeper tonight into the debris-littered Monarch coal mine that already has given up five bodies out of eight blast-entombed miners.

The men were trapped early yesterday by an explosion that dumped tons of wreckage into a tunnel communicating with the main shaft.

As rescue crews came to the surface with five bodies, they said it was possible Steve Davis, fire boss, had barricaded himself from the deadly gasses seeping through the mine. He was believed in a coal room two miles from the shaft.

Bodies of three miners were found near a wrecked mine motor car today, giving rise to a theory two cars had collided, throwing sparks which touched off the terrific explosion. A second motor car, on which Joe Jaramillo was riding, was sought under tons of debris at a junction where officials believe the two met.

Rescuers found the bodies of Tom Stevens, Ray Bailey and Oscar Baird as they dug out the motor car, buried in wreckage 6,100 feet underground from the main shaft. The bodies of Kester Novinger and Leland Ward were found 4,000 feet from the shaft.

Of ten men below the surface when the blast shook the mine early yesterday, only three remained unaccounted for. They were Davis, Jaramillo and Tony de Santis. William Jenkins and Nick Delpizzo escaped a few minutes after the explosion.

The entombed men went down to inspect fire walls they were building to ward off a blaze that had been burning for years.

Colorado law requires that rescue work continue until all the men are accounted for.

King Edward Flies To London Throne; Pledges Life to Task

Shatters Traditions, but Says He Will Follow Father's Footsteps.

Coronation Put Off More Than a Year

London Deep in Gloom; Silent Thousands Line Path of Ruler.

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 21.—Young Edward of Windsor, forging his own tradition, flew from a king's deathbed today to become Britain's bachelor monarch and to pledge he will "follow my father's footsteps" for the good of 500,000,000 subjects.

Behind in wind-swept Sandringham he left the Queen Mother Mary, who tonight knelt in the candlelight of a parish chapel before the simple bier of her liege, George V.

In London, amid historic ceremony, the new ruler swore the solemn oath of accession to become Edward VIII, King of Great Britain, Ireland and all the dominions beyond the seas, Defender of the Faith and Emperor of India.

Then he received the pledge of fealty from his Parliament.

Pledges Life to Subjects.

Before the privy council of the realm, recalling King George's unswerving devotion to constitutional government, he proclaimed:

"In this I am determined to follow my father's footsteps and work as he did throughout his life for the happiness and welfare of all classes of my subjects."

Meanwhile, as the world mourned him, the body of King George V, beloved 70-year-old ruler who died at 11:55 last night, lay tonight before a silver altar in the parish church at Sandringham, which stands on a wind-swept ridge.

Through the sleet and rain the simple oak coffin containing the monarch's body was carried on a hand bier by a detachment of Grenadier Guards to the church.

The body will be taken to London Thursday to lie in state in Westminster Hall until next Tuesday, when it will be removed to Windsor Castle for the funeral in St. George's Chapel. Burial will be at Windsor.

First British King to Fly.

Edward's dramatic flight from Sandringham to London to begin his reign at one stroke indicated that as King he would rule in his own particular manner, one which marked his colorful career as Prince of Wales. He became today the first British sovereign to fly.

Medieval customs marked two afternoon ceremonies following the King's modern entry into the city by airplane.

He took the oath of accession at an assembly of the privy council at St. James Palace and a short time later Parliament swore allegiance to the new King.

Age-old pageantry will formally proclaim him King at 10 a. m. Tomorrow from four places in the empire's capital—St. James Palace, Charing Cross, Temple Bar and the Royal Exchange. Guns will boom in salute to the sovereign.

Proclamations also will be made tomorrow in the Dominions of India and Northern Ireland, the colonies of the Isle of Man, Jersey and in various counties and municipal boroughs throughout the United Kingdom.

Solitary Throne Is There.

The bachelor status of Edward was sharply emphasized during the traditional loyalty ceremony in the House of Lords.

The solitary throne, with its royal red covering, stood on a dais. For nearly a quarter of a century there were thrones for King George and Queen Mary and also a chair for the Prince of Wales alongside his father.

There is no longer any Prince of Wales, and this chair, as well as Queen Mary's throne, was removed. The swearing of allegiance by members of parliament will take several days.

The speaker of the House of Commons, Capt. Edward Algenon Fitzroy, was the first to take the oath. He swore "allegiance to His Majesty King Edward VIII, his heirs and successors, according to the law."

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin and other members of the cabinet then took the oath and signed the roll. Women in the galleries wore complete mourning, even black stockings.

To the privy council, which met in a session of less than an hour at St. James' Palace, the King swore: "I, Edward Albert Christian George Andrew Patrick David, solemnly and sincerely, in the pres-

House Closes Out of Respect To King George

Secretary Hull Expresses Sorrow of Nation at Monarch's Death.

The members of the House of Representatives bowed their heads in prayer yesterday and then voted to adjourn out of respect to the memory of King George V of Great Britain.

It was the third time in the history of the Republic that the House had thus displayed its sorrow over the passing of a reigning monarch, the other adjournments having followed the death of Queen Victoria of Great Britain and King Albert of Belgium.

"Brandon" Owner Signs.

The General Assembly of Virginia, lawmaking body of a State which was the first English colony in the New World, adopted a resolution expressing sympathy for the British royal family and the people of the empire.

One of the two framers of the resolution, Senator Robert W. Daniel, is owner of the famous estate, Brandon, on the James River, the grant for which was signed by King James I in 1616.

A White House luncheon for Lady Lindsay, wife of the British Ambassador, scheduled for yesterday, was canceled.

The White House reception for members of Congress, which was to have been held tomorrow night, was postpond to February 10.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull called at the British Embassy and at the legations of the Dominions and that of the Irish Free State to convey the formal condolences of the American Government.

Hull Expresses Sorrow.

The Union Jack, symbol of an empire that embraces one quarter of the globe, was at half staff over the British Embassy. All embassies and legations here half-staffed their emblems, giving the diplomatic "rows" on Sixteenth street and Massachusetts avenue a funeral air.

Secretary Hull, attired in informal morning clothes, went from his home to the British Embassy, where he clasped the hand of Sir Ronald Lindsay, the ambassador, and expressed the Republic's sorrow.

This ceremony was repeated as Secretary Hull called in turn on Hume Wrong, charge d'affaires of

Widow Prays in Dimly Lit Chapel While Royal Servitors Stand By.

By the Associated Press.

Sandringham, Jan. 21.—Twice tonight the widowed Queen Mary walked through the rain and sleet from Sandringham House to the parish church to be with her dead husband.

Dressed in deep mourning and carrying an umbrella to protect herself against the elements, the Queen Mother followed behind the King's coffin on its half-mile journey to the church, accompanied by the Princess Royal and the Duchess of Kent.

She then returned home by automobile only to go back later in the evening to the little church to kneel in prayer before the bier.

Two women accompanied the widowed Queen on her second journey over the way she had often traveled with the King to and from worship.

Guards Are Withdrawn.

When they arrived at the little church, the guards withdrew and Queen Mary advanced alone to the bier, where she knelt for seven minutes in prayer.

Woodchoppers, innkeepers, stablemen, gardeners and other employes of the royal estate kept vigil tonight over the body of the King.

Flickering tapers cast light and shadow inside, where the sovereign so often worshiped with the people of this Norfolk district.

Outside, a bleak wind howled.

Darkness already had fallen when the body was borne to the little church from the house George liked to call his home. Angry clouds drove across the sky; the wind moaned through the fir trees, snow, then sleet and rain pelted down as the little procession moved along the path which George and Mary so often followed.

Estate Workers Bear Body.

Six estate workers, sturdy fellows in corduroy breeches and leather jackets, carried the body from the death chamber to the great glass-front door of Sandringham House; then placed it on the simple bier.

The procession moved silently on, with six stalwart Grenadier guardsmen at each side of the body. A wailing dirge, played by the King's piper, Pipe-Major Forysyth, sounded as they walked.

Guided by lanterns, the procession arrived at the church to be

Woman SEC Worker Killed By B. & O. Train at Station

Miss I. Lillian Rubenstein, 30, of 302 West Clifton Terrace northwest, either jumped or slipped in the path of the Gaithersburg local of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad as it was going through the station at Randolph Crossing at 6:30 p. m. yesterday. She was killed instantly.

The Rockville Rescue Squad pronounced her dead when they arrived at the scene. She had been thrown several yards up the track. She was removed to the undertaking parlors of Warner E. Pumphrey in Rockville.

The engineer of the train said he thought Miss Rubenstein had jumped. However, he added, she might have been trying to flag the train at the time and slipped on the icy platform.

She was identified by a driver's permit which was found in her pocketbook 15 feet from her body. Randolph Crossing is a mile south of Rockville.

Miss Rubenstein's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Rubenstein, said that their daughter had been employed by the Securities Exchange Commission. About a month ago she went on sick leave, suffering from overwork and nervousness.

At noon yesterday, her parents said, she went to Union Station to see a friend, Miss Osterlink, off to New York.

Investigators learned that a train for Brunswick, Md., left Union Station less than an hour ahead of the Frederick local. They believe Miss Rubenstein may have taken this train, getting off at Randolph station.

In addition to her parents, the woman is survived by three brothers, Moe Rubenstein, of 1414 Decatur street northwest; Samuel Rubenstein, of 4701 Connecticut avenue, and Julian Rubenstein, of New York, and a sister, Edith Risnay, of Palestine.

Ickes Lashes Gov. Talmadge At Conference

'Boondoggler,' Georgian Replies as New Dealer Attacks Critic.

By the Associated Press.

Leading a New Deal counter-attack on Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia, Secretary Ickes yesterday termed the Southern New Deal critic "his chain gang excellency," and added that his word could not be trusted.

Aroused by Talmadge's criticism of the PWA wage scale and the Administration's work relief program generally, the PWA administrator nevertheless told newspapermen that "really, I don't pay much attention to anything his chain gang excellency says."

Ickes then revived the previous statement that "Talmadge's word isn't any good." The sharpness of his word apparently betokened a rising Administration ire over Talmadge's anti-New Deal campaign in Georgia. Because of his frequent visits to Warm Springs, President Roosevelt considers the State his "other home."

Solid Delegation Is Sought.

A campaign to obtain a solid Roosevelt delegation from Georgia to the Democratic convention next June was organized by party leaders here last week after indications that Talmadge, who also has clashed bitterly with Harry L. Hopkins, and Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the Bureau of Public Roads, might enter the State primary himself.

Meanwhile, members of the Georgia Congressional delegation yesterday adopted a resolution calling upon the State Democratic executive committee to provide for a primary to instruct delegates to the Philadelphia Democratic National Convention.

The Georgians deferred action on selection of a manager for the Georgia Roosevelt campaign to combat the Talmadge drive, but promised an announcement today.

Wiley Moore, of Atlanta, conferred with the delegation members yesterday. He was offered the Georgia Roosevelt campaign managership last week, but declined, giving illness of his wife as the reason.

Shortly after Ickes spoke the broadcast division of the Federal communications commission adjourned for the day without taking action on an application involving the proposed broadcast of Talmadge's speech before a gathering of anti-New Deal Democrats in Macon, Ga., on January 29.

The request, filed on Saturday by Plain Talk Magazine, asked permission to telephone his address to Reynosa, Mexico, where it would be broadcast from the station used by Dr. John R. Brinkley.

Morris Beale, editor of Plain Talk, announced afterward he would seek a madamus in District of Columbia Supreme Court today in an effort to compel the commission to grant the application.

Borah Petitions.

Among Republicans, a Madison, Wisc., dispatch quoted State Senator Philip E. Nelson, of Maple, president of the Wisconsin Borah-For-President bloc, as saying petitions are being circulated to place the name of Senator William Borah, of Idaho, on the Republican presidential preference ballot in the April 7 primary.

In Chicago a Borah-for-President Club opened headquarters in a Loop hotel to co-ordinate activities in Wisconsin, Indiana, Illinois and Minnesota.

Here an attempt to align Negro support behind the Presidential candidacy of Borah was being planned by Representative Fish (Republican) New York, one of the senator's campaign managers.

Fish said he hoped to speak before the National Negro Congress to be held February 14 and 15 in Chicago "and explain Borah's whole record."

Bonus in House

to the President two years ago Mr. Roosevelt wrote Speaker Rainey: "I don't do business that way."

In view of that statement on record, observers were of the opinion the President will either veto or sign the bill, with a veto his most likely course. But Administration leaders in Congress do not hesitate to predict passage over a veto. The assumption is that a veto would not sacrifice many veterans' votes in the coming elections, if the bill became law in the meantime.

Inflationary implications of the bond-payment plans still were troubling a number of Congressional conservatives. During Senate debate Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, admitted the bill was "indirectly" inflationary.

In a letter to President Roosevelt and others yesterday, 16 members of the executive committee of the Economists National Committee on monetary policy said the bond payment plan may be "only slightly less inflationary" than an issue of greenbacks.

According to Associated Press dispatches from New York the committee said that if many veterans cashed their bonds immediately, banks carrying heavy investments in Government bonds would suffer, and the Government would encounter difficulties in its refunding operations.

Director of the Budget Daniel Bell recently told a Senate committee that immediate enactment of the bonus would cause some "shock" and "depressing effect" to the bond market.

On the Hustings

King Edward's Flight Recalls Roosevelt Has Shunned Planes During Presidency.

AMERICANS have become so accustomed to President Roosevelt breaking precedents and doing the unusual thing, they believe that when something new is done he will do it first. Thus there was surprise yesterday when the cables flashed that Great Britain's new King made the journey from Sandringham to London in an airplane. No other British monarch traveled in that fashion, nor has any American President while in office.

It is true that as the Prince of Wales, King Edward VIII was a flying enthusiast. But one American correspondent in London after the death of King George V—and before yesterday's news—cabled his newspaper that the Prince had made his last flight, that hereafter he would travel by the older and safer means of transportation.

• • • •

President Roosevelt, it will be remembered, added a highly dramatic touch to the 1932 Democratic national convention when he flew from Albany to Chicago to accept the party's nomination. After his election one of the correspondents who knew him well predicted that Mr. Roosevelt would not let the Presidency—or the Secret Service—deter him from making airplane trips.

But Mr. Roosevelt has not been in an airplane since he entered the White House. Perhaps there has been no reason for him to undertake such a trip. It is doubtful, however, whether the Secret Service would permit him to take a flight, if he desired.

But the issue of whether the President, if he wished, should be allowed to make an airplane flight has not arisen. If he is to be the first American President to travel by airplane while in office, the probabilities are that the event will take place this year. Campaign years are the periods when Presidents and other candidates do daring—and sometimes ridiculous—things.

It is the year when Presidential candidates are photographed wearing Indian feathers; driving hay-mowing machines; kissing babies and posing with musical comedy stars. They shun palatial yachts and court the attributes of the common man. Even Al Smith, who constantly refused to pose for what he termed "baloney pictures," wore out dozens of new brown derbies in 1928.

• • • •

There is some speculation as to whether President Roosevelt this spring will make his annual fishing trip aboard Vincent Astor's palatial yacht. He may use his new Coast Guard cruiser instead. He may make an airplane trip to please a populace which likes daring and unusual men in public office. Undoubtedly some spectacular stunt like the Chicago flight in 1932 already has been worked out by the President's political advisers for this year's campaign.

Whatever the President does, however, it will be put down to politics and not his private desire. In that respect hereditary sovereigns have an advantage over those rulers who must be elected to office. When the new King Edward jumps into a plane, he may be actuated by the knowledge that he is pleasing his subjects, even though he may be frightening them temporarily. But his actions are not put down to vote-seeking.

King Edward has frequently demonstrated an ability to please crowds. Instances of this occurred when he twice passed through Baltimore by train on his visit to the White House in 1924. On the first occasion he was on his way from New York, where he had landed that morning, to the White House. When he emerged on the rear platform of his train at Baltimore, he was nattily dressed in a double-breasted blue suit with a pin stripe. He wore one of the blue shirts he helped popularize.

For a minute he was shy but dignified. He nervously puffed on a cigarette and jammed one hand in and out of a pocket. The crowd loved a prince in such a role and cheered loudly. Suddenly he spied a small crippled boy in a wheel chair, on the edge of the crowd, trying with difficulty to see him. The Prince gave orders to bring the wheel chair to the edge of his train. Smiling kindly he leaned over the rail and chatted with the youngster. The crowd yelled even louder its pleasure.

• • • •

Four hours later on the return trip to New York the Prince's train again paused in Baltimore. When the Prince appeared he had lost his dignified appearance and his shyness. His coat and waistcoat had been left inside the train—the sleeves of the natty blue shirt had been roughly cut, as if by a penknife, just below the shoulders, and there were the blue braces for all to see. It was a devilishly hot August day and the Prince, unaccustomed to steel trains, desired to be cool. So did everyone else, and thus he became akin to the commoner. But many there lost their illusions of the grandeur of princes that day. Yet they liked it and they liked him, too.

Editor's note: In an effort to satisfy the curiosity of some of those who have kindly read this column in the last three weeks, may we say that the word "hustings," used in its title, has nothing to do, as has been suggested, with any tributary of the Potomac or with husking bees nor is it a word we have composed. Webster defines the word as originally meaning the platform from which candidates for Parliament formerly were nominated and now as "any place where political campaign speeches are made." It has been used here to designate a place for political discussion.

Move to Defer Neutrality Step Is Topic on Hill

Lack of Time Cited; Pittman Assures President That Law Will Pass.

By Felix Bruner.

While Senator Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, was telling President Roosevelt yesterday that neutrality legislation substantially in the form desired by the Administration would be enacted soon, talk was heard on Capitol Hill of abandoning any attempt to enact new legislation at this session of Congress.

Although Senators interested in the neutrality bill were hesitant about talking for publication, the opinion was expressed that the time is too short to formulate a permanent neutrality policy between now and February 29, when the present act expires.

The Senate already has before it a resolution introduced by Senator Thomas (Democrat), Utah, providing for extension of the present law for one year. The shortness of time and the existence of the Italo-Ethiopian war were given by Thomas as reasons why he believed no new law should be attempted now.

"Awkward" Situation.

Some opinion has been expressed that a change in the "rules" as applied to present belligerents might prove embarrassing. The suggestion has been made that the two warring countries be excepted under a new law.

Senator Pittman, at the White House, predicted that the Senate committee would report a bill within two weeks. This would allow barely four weeks for consideration, a short time in view of the expected controversy over the subject.

Pittman discounted the effect the present disagreement over the conduct of hearings by the Senate Munitions Committee might have on neutrality legislation. He said he did not believe the controversy and the cessation of hearings by the committee would interfere with enactment of a law.

The Foreign Relations Committee chairman said there would be no hearings on the proposed legislation.

"We do not lack for facts," he said. "Our problem is purely one of adopting policies and finding language which is not difficult of interpretation."

Would Extend Power.

The present law makes mandatory an embargo on munitions and arms to warring nations. The proposed law would extend the power of the President to permit him to embargo other materials and to restrict financing.

Meanwhile, Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, chairman of the Munitions Committee, continued consideration of the next move to be made by his group. A meeting of the committee will be held today to determine whether a request shall be made of the Senate for funds to continue the hearings and to compile the committee's findings.

The committee itself is divided on the subject of whether the hearings should continue. It is expected, however, that Nye will be able to muster a majority for the fund request. He has indicated he will ask for less than $10,000. The request will go to the Committee on Audit and Control probably Thursday.

Request for more funds is certain to precipitate another heated debate, with such leaders as Senators Robinson, Glass and Connally in opposition to the committee. Nye's recent assertion that Woodrow Wilson "falsified" when he denied knowledge of secret treaties during the World War is certain to come in for further caustic comment.

A protest against new legislation at this time was voiced by John M. DiSilvestro, a former officer of the Sons of Italy in the United States and Canada, who called upon Senators Pittman and Borah. He said that to enact legislation under which oil and cotton shipments might be held down might "defeat the very neutrality which we want to establish." He asserted such legislation would make the United States a partner of the League of Nations.

Bill to Finance Security Plan Back in House

By the Associated Press.

A bill carrying long-delayed funds for the Administration social security program yesterday started rolling through the congressional mill.

A $58,204,100 deficiency bill, recommended to the House yesterday by its appropriation committee, contained a $42,604,500 item for social security. The appropriation failed of passage last session in the closing-hour filibuster of the late Senator Long, of Louisiana.

The social security money—$40,965,800 of it for matching grants to States—comprised approximately two-thirds of the second supply bill of the session.

Vote This Week.

House leaders proposed to pass the measure this week, after disposing of the bonus question today. The Senate intends to pass it, likewise, ahead of the independent offices appropriation bill, already sent in by the House.

The $58,204,100 supply bill figure was reduced from the $103,272,705 in the original measure of last session because only approximately half the time now is left to be financed before the new fiscal year beginning July 1.

The social security and some other new activities have been conducted for months on a skeletonized basis.

Saying the security appropriations were expected to be available around February 1, the committee told the House that provision was made in the bill for payments to States for the third and fourth quarters of the 1936 fiscal year on State security plans approved before or during the February 1-June 30 period. Provisions were not made for plans approved before the quarter in which they were submitted or before February 1, 1936. This, the committee said, will allow States with plans submitted before February 1, to be paid commencing on that date if the plans were in operation at that time.

$50,000,000 Cost.

The Appropriations Committee also granted permission for payments, out of previously appropriated funds, of cotton loans whose use was left in doubt by the Supreme Court AAA decision. These were estimated to run between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000.

The new item in the bill was $889,725 for the Bureau of Prisons to take care of an increase in Federal prison population, which officials said was due chiefly to internal revenue law vollations and counterfeiting. Another new allowance was $851,000 for what were described as unusually heavy administrative expenses of the Treasury in connection with the emergency banking, gold reserve, and silver purchases act.

Test of Security Act Welcomed by Miles

New York, Jam 21 (AP).—Defending the legality of the social security act, Vincent M. Miles, of the Social Security Board, tonight said cries of "unconstitutionality" against it emanate from persons who do not think the Government can relieve human misery.

Miles told the Retail Dry Goods Association the board welcomes a constitutionality test "to relieve the worry of the millions of old people in the country and the workers in industry."

Charge Against Kierdorf Dropped in Labatt Case

London, Ontario, Jan. 21 (AP).—Charges of armed robbery and abduction against Herman Kierdorf, Detroit salesman, in connection with the kidnaping in 1934 of John S. Labatt, London brewer, were dismissed today for lack of evidence at a preliminary hearing.

Alabama Rests Case in Fourth Trial of Negro

Attorneys for Heywood Patterson Are Denied Mistrial Motion.

By the Associated Press.

Decatur, Ala., Jan. 21.—The State rested tonight in the fourth trial of Heywood Patterson, one of the Negro defendants in the Scottsboro case, after the defense sought vainly for a mistrial.

Attorney Clarence L. Watts entered the motion declaring the court had "shown impatience" with defense counsel. He was quickly overruled by Judge W. W. Callahan.

"We feel comments of the court tending to minimize importance of the defense has made it impossible for us to get a fair trial," Watts told the court.

Judge Callahan said he would "rectify" if the attorney would be specific, then directed the jury of 12 white men to disregard the remarks Watts recited as the basis for his motion.

Case Ended Quickly.

A purported confession by Patterson was related at the first of the re-trials ordered by the United States Supreme Court.

Opie Golden, guard at the State Penitentiary, testified the confession was made orally by Patterson, whose previous conviction was reversed by the United States Supreme Court on grounds Negroes were "systematically" excluded from Alabama juries.

Although one Negro sat on the grand jury which returned new indictments in the case, none of the 12 drawn in the panel of 100 for the Patterson trial remained when the jury was finally selected.

7 Excused "For Cause."

Seven were excused "for cause" and the remaining five were struck by the defense or State. Strikes are made by number, making it impossible to determine which side eliminated the Negroes.

Golden said Patterson, thrice convicted and sentenced to die, told him he attacked "them girls" and that his eight co-defendants likewise were guilty.

They are accused of attacking Mrs. Victoria Price and Ruby Bates, mill workers, aboard a freight train near Scottsboro, Ala., in 1931.

The statement was made by Patterson, Golden testified, in 1934 while the Negro was being held in the death house pending appeal to the Supreme Court.

Waited a Day.

Cross-examined by Samuel S. Leibowitz, of New York, chief of defense counsel, the guard said he made no effort to relay the information to the prison warden until the next day. He said that when the warden went to Patterson's cell the prisoner refused to talk.

Preceding Golden, Mrs. Price testified for the eighth time regarding the alleged mass attack. She identified Patterson as one of her attackers.

During a recess in the proceedings, Judge W. W. Callahan fixed dates for trials of two other defendants to begin next week. He set January 27 for the trial of Charlie Weems and January 30 for Andy Wright.

Suicide Motive Seen in Crash Of Big Plane

Passenger Hinted Cause; Three Bodies Found in Pilots' Cockpit.

By the Associated Press.

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 21.—Investigators studying meager clews in the crash of the transcontinental plane "Southerner" in Arkansas considered today the possibility a passenger, bent on self-destruction, caused the tragedy.

C. R. Smith, president of the American Air Lines, operators of the liner in which 17 lives were lost last Tuesday, said in Chicago this was "one of many theories."

The development came while inspectors weighed the importance of an automatic pistol found in the wreckage of the huge craft near Goodwin, Ark.

It was theorized a passenger—temporarily deranged or planning to commit suicide without invalidating his insurance—slugged the pilot and co-pilot, causing the plane to plunge out of control.

Smith said he was convinced the plane was "in good flying condition" and the pilot was not endeavoring to land.

Department of Commerce officials said the "human element," and not mechanical defects, caused the crash.

Vidal Withholds Comment.

The Dallas (Tex.) News reported one of the passengers tried to buy an additional $25,000 in insurance after boarding the plane in the East.

Smith said, however, he had no way of learning the amount of insurance carried by passengers.

"A third body, other than those of the pilot and co-pilot, was found in the forward part of the wreckage, ahead of the two motors," he said, adding, however, the identity of the passenger had not been established. He said this fact "is not entirely conclusive that the passenger was in the cock-pit or in the forward part of the ship when it crashed."

Eugene L. Vidal, director of Air Commerce, and Maj. R. W. Schroeder, chief airlines inspector, withheld comment.

Vidal said he had not yet received a report on the finding of a pistol and a piece of metal with a hole through it about the size of a bullet in the plane wreckage. Sheriff J. M. Campbell of Forrest, Ark., who found the metal, said if the hole was made by a bullet, it was fired from inside the ship.

Ed Hurlburt, Memphis Airlines official, said he believed a passenger owned the weapon. The metal and pistol will be inspected by Department of Justice experts at Washington.

Wife He Jilted Ends Career Of Honor Man at West Point

Secret Bride of Cadet Schrein Says She Waited Four Years, Learned Another Had Won Him; Expose Follows.

By the Associated Press.

Steele City, Nebr., Jan. 21.—Conflicting love affairs were credited today by his young wife with terminating the Army career of a West Point honor student.

Announcing she would seek a divorce, Mrs. Reinhold T. Schrein revealed at the same time that she had informed United States Military Academy officials of her secret marriage, because her husband had switched his affections to an undisclosed young Harrisburg, Pa., woman.

Schrein, 25, resigned from the Cadet Corps last Friday after his marriage, a violation of West Point rules, became known.

The Schreins were wed March 25, 1931, at Clay Center, Kans., in the culmination of a Doane College, Crete, Nebr., romance, Mrs. Schrein said. They agreed to keep their marriage a secret and in 1932 Schrein entered the Military Academy without revealing it to officials.

At first he wrote regularly and in endearing terms, she asserted. But she did not see him again until she went to West Point during the 1935 Christmas vacation.

"After I had waited for him more than four years, he had asked me to have our marriage annulled," the young wife said. "I refused and went to see him. At West Point they told me he was visiting a girl in Harrisburg. I waited until he returned.

"He told me he was in love with the girl and I warned him he would have to give up his commission or her. He chose her, so I notified the academy."

The young man, son of the Rev. Adolph Schrein, Lutheran pastor at Crete, Nebr., met his wife, formerly Lucille Taylor, while both attended Doane College. His parents were not informed of the wedding.

Schrein, his father said, probably will go into business in the East, now that his Army prospects are ended.

Britons Seek Plan Here To Aid German Jews

New York, Jan. 21 (AP).—Three British leaders of Jewry came here tonight on what they said was an "exploratory" trip to confer on a plan to remove Jews from the German Reich.

The delegation comprised Sir Herbert Samuel, first British High Commissioner for Palestine; Viscount Bearsted, chairman of Shell Transport and Trading Co., Ltd., and Simon Marks, chain department store owner.

In a formal statement Sir Herbert said: "We have not come with any specific proposals, but rather to discuss various plans and to agree upon methods for aiding the Jews who are forced to leave a country in which their lives have been made intolerable."

Body Washed Up by Sea Identified as Lost Flier

Santa Monica, Calif., Jan. 21 (AP).—A body washed up by the sea was identified by two persons today as that of Lieut. Arthur H. Skaer, jr., whose disappearance months ago was a major aviation mystery.

Lieut. Skaer, an Army Reserve pilot, disappared last July 30 while making the first test flight of a new type of pursuit plane designed for Army use.

W. A. Williams, superintendent of an aircraft factory, last man to see Lieut. Skaer alive, said the whipcord trousers on the body were the same as those worn by the flier. A brother of the long-missing aviator identified an initialed belt buckle.

Indictment Refused For Father's Slayer

Tarboro, N. C., Jan. 21 (AP).—The Edgecombe County grand jury today refused to indict Moses Jefferson, 17-year-old boy who killed his father, Wright Jefferson, with a shotgun December 28.

The boy said his father was drunk and beating his mother when he killed him. The grand jury failed to find a "true bill."

'Jafsie' Faces New Grilling, Hoffman Hints

Governor Denies He Talked With Roosevelt About Case Saturday.

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 21.—Gov. Harold G. Hoffman said today he still "may request" authorities to question Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon, Lindbergh ransom intermediary, when he returns from his voyage to Latin America.

In a list of questions submitted to the Governor tonight was one asking whether he intended to question Dr. Condon about reported discrepancies in his testimony at the trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann and his "tell all" articles in a weekly magazine.

The Governor replied he felt Dr. Condon should have been questioned "long before this" and said, "I may request his questioning by authorities when he returns."

At Panama Friday.

Dr. Condon, upon arrival at Panama Friday, wired Attorney General David T. Wilentz, offering to return immediately. Wilentz replied it was not necessary.

The Governor, who five days ago granted Hauptmann a 30-day reprieve, was reported reliably to be interested in what happened to all of the $50,000 ransom money and to feel that failure to find all of it was one of the unsolved angles of the case.

The State Executive believes that although the State contended most of the money went into Hauptmann's stock market speculations, only about $20,000 was actually traced. He believes that if the entire $50,000 was spent by Hauptmann, more should have turned up in the National Treasury and more than approximately $14,000 should have been traced to Hauptmann.

Questioned on Reprieve.

Despite denials by investigating agencies and many banks that the search for ransom bills has been discontinued, the Governor was understood to have information such an order was given.

Reports have circulated recently that the Governor intended to grant Hauptmann more than one reprieve, but he said today that at present he did not propose to do so.

The Governor said he had received no request from Hauptmann to see him and had not heard from Mrs. Hauptmann since Friday.

He said he did not discuss the Hauptmann case with President Roosevelt Saturday, and denied conferring with investigators today.

The State police were understood to be checking data on a "J. J. Faulkner," an employe on the Third avenue railway, New York City, who disappeared months ago without cashing his pay checks.

Attorney General David T. Wilentz said yesterday the police had informed him Faulkner had been located, but had no connection with the Lindbergh case. It was reported today, however, that this Faulkner was confused with several others. His signature was turned over to State handwriting experts and found to be different from that of the "J. J. Faulkner" on a deposit slip found in a New York bank the day a batch of Lindbergh ransom bills were turned in.

Street Favors Forming Board To Study Crime

Commission Would be Vast Aid, Welfare Director Is Convinced.

Formation of a crime commission would be of material aid to the administration of justice in the District, Elwood Street, director of public welfare, said yesterday.

His opinion, Street said, was based on the study of crime commissions in other cities, the peculiarities of the District, and the knowledge of the penal and rehabilitation activities under direction of the welfare board.

"I have been studying the idea of a crime commission for several years," Street said. "I have studied the work of such commission in Baltimore and other places and believe such a commission would be admirable for the District.

Sees Economy.

"As a citizen, interested in the reduction of crime, the protection of life and property and the reduction of the taxes expended for the apprehension and handling of criminals, I think information which the crime commission would collect and make available would be of great value in achieving those results.

"As director of Public Welfare, with about 3,000 inhabitants of penal institutions for whose care I am responsible, I am interested in any movement which would help increase the effectiveness of all of the agencies which are involved in sending prisoners to those institutions, or in getting them out of those institutions at the proper time.

"The penal institutions are only a part of the chain of law-enforcing and crime-punishing agencies, and I am interested in that whole chain being effective as it possibly can be.

"I believe that a properly considered crime commission, with widely representative leadership, would help strengthen the work of all of the links in this chain and would help in public education in the causes of crime and its constructive treatment.

Would Welcome Advice.

"I am sure the Board of Public Welfare, as far as its responsibility goes, would welcome the study and advice of such a body regarding operation of its institutions.

"I think a crime commission might be especially desirable in the District of Columbia, where we have no legal methods of expressing our opinions through the vote. Such a body would be helpful to inform and express public sentiment on the vitality important public matter of crime and its treatment."

Estate of Rich Briton May Go on Debt to U. S.

New York, Jan 21 (AP).—The Governments of the United States and Great Britain may eventually profit by $416,264 from the estate of James Bertram, close associate of Andrew Carnegie.

Bertram, who died October 23, 1934, willed that in the event his daughter, Janet E. Bertram, dies without issue, the estate go "absolutely to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, of the Kingdom of Great Britain, to use and apply the same on account of the payment of the national debt of Great Britain to the United States of America".

Josiah Brown, Oldest Rutgers Alumnus, Dies

Newark, N. J., Jan. 21 (AP).—Josiah J. Brown, 96, oldest Rutgers University graduate in point of age and class, died yesterday.

Brown was graduated in 1860. Later he went west to carry on missionary work in Kansas and Missouri. At Independence, Kan., he founded a Presbyterian Church.

Old Simon, 'Do Nothing Man,' Dies of Blood Poisoning at 76

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Famous as the "do nothing" man, "Old Simon's" indifference probably cost him his life. He neglected a foot infection and the result was blood poisoning.

Old Simon, as he was familiarly known here, did not talk until he was 21. Until he was 75, which was a year ago, when he went to Washington and spoiled his record, he had never been more than a mile from home, had never ridden in a taxicab, street car or boat; had never attended a prize fight, a movie, a wedding or a ball game; had never seen a building more than four stories high, and never had a sweetheart.

He had a pencil which he had used for 50 years.

It was The Washington Post that made Old Simon comparatively a man of the world. As the guest of this newspaper, he went to Washington and did many of the things he had never done before. He rode in street cars and taxicabs, visited department stores, and rode to the top of the Washington Monument.

He went to a movie, and Estelle Taylor, who was making a personal appearance, put a gardenia in his lapel.

Cummings Lauds J. A. Finch Retiring as Pardon Attorney

Bosses Were Not 'Bosses' for Veteran Employe of Justice Unit.

James A Finch, whose mild manner and retiring personality belie his dealings with some of the worst lawbreakers of the last generation, is retiring as pardon attorney of the Department of Justice.

Yesterday was his last day at his desk, although the retiriment does not go into effect until February 29, 16 days after his seventieth birthday. Today he and Mrs. Finch will do their packing and tomorrow they entrain for Miami.

Attorney General Cummings, latest in the line of Mr. Finch's "bosses" who weren't "bosses," lavished warm praise upon his outgoing adviser yesterday at farewell ceremonies.

Extoled by Cummings.

"Should Mr. Finch feel moved, in his retirement, to overcome his well-tried discretion and write his reminiscences, I feel sure that we should have before us a moving tale of human drama, for he has seen into tens of thousands of lives, and has watched the characters of men put to the test that arises when a wrongdoer is restored to society."

That's what Cummings said. The object of his laudation fidgeted like one of the country school boys he used to teach.

Finch was born in Grahamsville, N. Y., February 13, 1866. His boyhood was spent in Ellenville, where he attended school. He taught a few years in country schools but gave that up because even his best friends said teachers get to be "old fogies" when they mature.

Forty-six years ago he took a civil service examination and soon he was in Washington as a Department of Justice clerk. Before long he was promoted to the post of librarian.

"I got my instructions from William Howard Taft (then Solicitor General)," said Finch. "He said 'When we send for a book we want it like a Texan wants a gun—damn quick.'"

Served Many Administrations.

Taking up law in his spare time, Finch received his degree from Columbian (now George Washington) in 1903. Twenty-eight years ago he was named pardon attorney by Attorney General Bonaparte. Subsequently he served under Attorneys General Wickersham, McReynolds, Gregory, Palmer, Daugherty, Stone, Sargent, Mitchell and Cummings.

"And not one of them," he says proudly, "ever attempted to dictate a decision in a pardon case, no matter how strong the feeling of the Attorney General, the President, the public or anyone else."

Through the years, however, he has had to deal with hundreds of Senators, Representatives and State Governors, not to mention friends and relatives of convicts, who were interested in gaining the release of constitutents. It is the Attorney General who makes recommendations for pardon to the President and every case investigated by Finch was disposed of in conformity with his findings.

In 1917 he offered himself for war service. President Wilson directed him to remain at his desk.

But today, for the first time since 1890, Finch is "at liberty." He and Mrs. Finch live at 3625 Davenport street northwest. Until next May, however, the address will be Miami, Fla.

Tugwell and Ickes Get New 'Ratings'

Chicago, Jan. 21 (AP).—Arthur D. Whiteside, president of Dun & Bradstreet, told the National-American Wholesale Grocers Association today what he thought of two members of President Roosevelt's brain trust.

His description:

Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell: "Nobody can tell him anything because he won't listen to a thing. He is egotistic, good looking and clever, and everybody likes him. The President and Mrs. Roosevelt and everybody else likes him, and his philosophy permeates Washington."

Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes: "You can't do much with someone who won't listen to you."

4 Indicted in Wilson Case

McDonald; five counts, naming each of the indicted men.

(a) That Sutton, Cleary, Dunn and Myers began conspiring to kill McDonald September 23, last year. They continued the conspiracy until October 23, when Wilson was killed.

(b) That the aforementioned quartet tried to procure another person to kill McDonald.

(c) That the same men conspired to get Anthony ("Tony the Stinger") Cugino, to kill McDonald.

(d) That the men conspired with persons unknown to slay the gambler.

(e) That the men attempted to secure persons unknown by unknown means to kill McDonald.

Murder Count First.

State's Attorney James H. Pugh late today said the murder indictment in the Wilson killing will be used first in his effort to send the four men to the gallows.

They will be brought to trial as soon as possible and, if found guilty, will be hanged at the Maryland State Penitentiary in Baltimore. It probably will take three weeks to bring McDermott across the continent from Alcatraz.

For the first time today the names of 11 witnesses who appeared before the venire here yesterday and this morning officially was made public.

Those who were summoned and told, under an armed guard of Montgomery County Officers, what they knew of the killing were McDonald and his pretty wife, Viola, who saw the shooting of Wilson; Elsie Bond, Lieut. John Fowler and Sergt. Earl Hartman, members of the Wilson squad of the Washington police; former Montgomery County Police Chief A. A. Moxley, Dr. Cyrus Hawk, who performed the autopsy on the body of the newspaper carrier; Dr. O. S. Parrett, of the staff of Washington Sanitarium, where Wilson died; Mrs. Margaret Wilson, widow of the murdered man; J. S. Bardwell and Sergt. Joseph Nolte.

Pugh refused today to reveal the parts played by Elsie Bond and Bradwell, so they remain mystery witnesses in the case.

Upon receiving the indictments, Judge Charles W. Woodward dismissed the grand jury, which convened here yesterday.

No sooner had word of the indictments reached the Capital than it was learned here that Maryland's Secretary of State Thomas L. Dawson, who maintains law offices here, has been retained to defend Sutton, and that other attorneys have been sought.

When the grand jury met today the armed guard of khaki-uniformed officers was absent. Pugh stated he believed the policemen unnecessary today, as only three witnesses were to testify.

Throughout yesterday, however, ten men, bearing automatics and rifles, blocked the third floor of the big, white courthouse here. It is believed precautions were taken to safeguard Jenkins from possible vengeance at the hands of former "pals."

No sooner had the grand jury vanished than life in this little city returned to normal. The air of tenseness vanished from the courthouse and members of the venire which returned the indictments sped to their homes through the melting snow.

H. J. Browne, Scientist Here, Is Dead at 75

Discoverer of 372-Year Weather Cycle; Once on Post Staff.

Herbert Janvrin Browne, 75, noted scientist, newspaperman and adventurer, died yesterday at Garfield Hospital of pneumonia and heart complications after an illness of ten days.

Famed as a meteorologist and oceanographer, Browne perhaps won his greatest public recognition for his predictions of weather conditions many months, and sometimes even years, in advance. He was the discoverer of a 372-year weather cycle.

For a long while the Weather Bureau refused to recognize Browne's forecasts, rejecting them as unorthodox. However, they proved accurate to such a degree some of his methods subsequently were adopted. For many years, however, Browne and the Weather Bureau engaged in a controversy.

Many Magazine Stories.

On the basis of his weather forecast, Browne, who lived at 1300 Massachusetts avenue northwest, wrote many magazine articles. Since 1923 he had been developing the theory of oceanic control of the weather from lunar tidal influences.

Facile with his pen and active in executing his ideas, Browne was well known as a newspaperman in an earlier era of American journalism.

For many years he was connected with The Washington Post, the New York World, the New York Herald, the New York American, the Chicago American and other papers.

It was Browne who was instrumental in founding the Washington Times as an independent newspaper.

As an adventurer, Browne was interested in the revolutionary movement in Cuba, and later in Mexico. At one time he acted as an agent for the Mexican President Carranza. In this role he supervised the shipment of arms to Mexico from the United States.

In later years one of Browne's most prized possessions was a large opal presented him by Carranza.

Born in Fremont, N. H., of an old colonial family he was educated at Exeter and the University of Michigan.

He was a member of the National Press Club, the Farm Hands Club, the American Association for the Advancement of Science and the Astronomical Society of the Pacific.

Surviving Mr. Browne are two daughters, Mrs. Margaret M. Mackey, of Rochester, N. Y., and Mrs. Hadley F. Freeman, of Lakewood, Ohio.

Mr. Browne also is survived by several grandchildren, including Charles and Barry Browne, sons of Maj. Charles H. Browne, U. S. A., deceased, who died at Langley Field in 1927.

Funeral services will be held at the Hines undertaking establishment Friday at 1:30 p. m., followed by burial in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Estate Left by 'Roxy' Held Less Than $5,000

New York, Jan. 21 (AP).—The value of the estate of Samuel L. Rothafel, the "Roxy" of the theater, was put at "less than $5,000" today by his widow, Rosa R. Rothafel, in Surrogate's Court. He died January 13.

Mrs. Rothafel, seeking to be appointed administratix, said she had been unable to find a will. She declared her husband owned no real estate, and the personal estate consists almost entirely of a claim against the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, now in reorganization.

Women Praise Celler's Fight On Section 213

The fight of Representative Emmanuel Celler (Democrat), of New York, against "Section 213," the marriage clause, in the economy act, brought him the praise of the General Federation of Women's Clubs yesterday.

A delegaion headed by Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, president, and Mrs. William Dick Sporborg, legislative chairman of the federation, called on Representative Celler at the Capitol to thank him for his efforts.

"Section 213," which has been widely denounced by women's organizations, forbids husband and wife both working for the Government.

"We're here to thank you—you're the only man in Congress willing to fight for us," Mrs. Sporborg told Representative Celler.

"Get after Representative Cochran who blocked it yesterday," Celler told the women.

Representative Cochran, a Missouri Democrat, objected Monday when Celler sought to get action on a bill to repeal the marriage clause.

Celler told Mrs. Sporborg, Mrs. Lawson and the presidents of 20 State clubs that the marriage clause had caused the dropping of 1,600 persons. Thus, he said, the spreading of jobs, which is the purpose of the clause, had been only neglible. On the other hand, Celler said, the clause had impaired the integrity of the Civil Service by making martail status instead of fitness the determining factor, and has been "completely unfair in its workings since it applies only to the lowest income groups."

J. H. Tabler, 64, Funeral Home Founder, Dies

Burial in Congressional Cemetery to Follow Rites Today.

John Howard Tabler, 64, inventor of United States Army devices, died at his home, Lanham, Md., Monday, after a long illness. He was the founder of the funeral home here which bears his name.

Born in Baltimore, the son of the late Edwin H. and Emma R. Tabler, he came to this city when a boy and was educated in the District public schools. He lived here until four years ago when he retired from the funeral business he founded 46 years ago and moved to Lanham. He was succeeded by his brother, Norval K. Tabler.

A tongueless buckle, on display at the Smithsonian Museum, adopted by the Army for ambulance work and airplanes, bears his name and is widely used.

His first invention, a blanket fastener, was invented after Tabler watched soldiers in nearby Washington camps tying their blankets with string at the outbreak of the Spanish-American War.

Funeral services will be held from the Tabler funeral home at 2 p. m. today. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Jean G. Tabler; two sons, J. M. and Edwin; two brothers, Norval K. and Frank R., and a sister Mrs. William R. Benham, all of Washington.

Miss M. S. Lawrence Dies at Home Here

In 1917 she came to Washington. She was interested in numerous charities, including the Washington Home for Incurables, the Episcopal Home and the Washington Humane Society. She was a member of the Colonial Dames of America and was registrar of the Washington Society.

Miss Lawrence is survived by two nieces, Mrs. Walter Schaff, of Youngstown, Ohio, and Mrs. Howard Huggins, of San Jose, Calif., and a nephew, John J. Lawrence, also of San Jose.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed. Burial will be in Harrisburg, Pa.

Fairfax County To Honor Clerk At Party Today

Frederick W. Richardson Will Be Feted for Service Years.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Alexandria 43-F-31.

Attorneys of Fairfax County, Va., will again attempt to pay homage to Frederick W. (Uncle Tudie) Richardson for his 55 years of service as clerk of Fairfax County and the county circuit court. The ceremonies will take place tomorrow at 10 a. m. in the courthouse at Fairfax and will be part of the January term of the court.

The ceremonies were scheduled to take place yesterday afternoon but were postponed when it was discovered the committee in charge of arrangements had forgotten that yesterday was a banking holiday because of the birthday of Robert E. Lee. The large silver cup to be presented to the clerk had been placed in the bank vault. Because of a time lock it could not be opened until this morning.

The Fairfax Bar Association will be joined by attorneys from all sections of Northern Virginia in honoring Uncle Tudie. The committee in charge of arrangements are Assistant Secretary of State R. Walton Moore, former Commonwealth Attorney Wilson M. Farr and John S. Barbour all of the Fairfax bar.

The Fairfax County Chapter of the American Red Cross greatly exceeded its quota in the annual Red Cross Roll Call, according to a report made public yesterday. Incomplete returns from the various sections of the county show a total of 1,302 members and collections of $1,528.31. The county quota was 1,200 members.

The Madeira School at Greenway ranked first in the total collections reported, with 197 members enrolled and collections of $290.55. Reports from other sections were: Town of Fairfax, 52 members, $95.50; town of Vienna, 47 members, $47; town of Herndon, 40 members, $40; town of Falls Church, 115 members, $115; McLean, 64 members, $76.50; Falls Church district, 42 members, $53; Mount Vernon district, 86 members, $146.50; Centerville district, 29 members, $29; Burke, 25 members, $30; Lorton, 207 members, $207, and Fort Belvoir, 168 members, $189. There were 229 residents of Fairfax County who enrolled in Washington, but had their contributions of $219.26 returned to the county.

Mrs. Russell A. Lynn, of Herndon, for the past 16 years county chairman of the Red Cross, has resigned and Miss Jennie Moore, of Fairfax; Mrs. John W. Echols, of Vienna and Mrs. Fannie Lou Seamons, of Herndon, have been appointed to draft resolutions of appreciation for her service to the county. Mrs. William J. Cleveland, of Seminary, has resigned as secretary of the chapter, and Mrs. Seamons has been appointed to fill the vacancy until the annual election of officers in February. Mrs. J. Hunter Mack, of McLean, vice chairman, has appointed the following nominating committee: Mrs. E. D. Vosbury, of Merrifield, Miss Sarah Cox, of Woodlawn and Mrs. Albert N. Lester, of Falls Church.

Mrs. J. Craig Hunter, of Vienna; Mrs. Seamons, Mrs. Cleveland and Mrs. Claude W. Oliver, of Baileys Cross Roads, have been named a committee to formulate a tentative program of activities for the year. Members of the executive committee and of the several branch chapters have been asked to submit suggestions. Among the activities suggested are tonsillectomy and dental clinics for underprivileged children, the placing of first aid kits and supplies in all schools of the county and at highway danger points.

The Merrifield Improvement Association last night voted to ask the board of supervisors of Fairfax County to increase the county budget for the next fiscal year so as to provide at least two additional county police to patrol the highways at night.

Members of the association have stated that it is the duty of the county to provide more protection to farmers and rural residents from thieves operating along the highways. They contend that the present county police force is inadequate to patrol the heavily traveled highways both day and night.

The association will urge State Senator John W. Rust and Delegate John C. Mackall to support the bill sponsored by the State department of education providing minimum teachers' salaries of $720 and a scientific teachers' pension system. Other business before the State Assembly indorsed by the Merrifield Association include a ratification of the Federal child labor amendment; social security legislation, embodying old-age pensions, unemployment insurance and maximum hours of labor. No specific bill before the State Assembly was indorsed.

Miss Corita Seoane and Mrs. Dana Miller were elected to represent the association on the rural recreation center county committee, and $10 was donated to the county fund now being collected for the establishment of the center. Dana Miller was appointed delegate to the February meeting of the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce.

H. B. Derr, county agricultural agent, has called a meeting of the county planning committee for this evening at 7:30 p. m. in the courthouse at Fairfax. The subject scheduled for discussion is "Do Farmers Want the Federal Government to Aid Them With Farm Problems?"

Apartments in Rossdhu Castle Intimated in Rezoning Petition

Montgomery Commissioners Asked to Make Area Residential 'C,' Hearing February 24; Takoma Park Seeks Police Court.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST,
Telephone, Shepherd 2363.

Transformation of Rossdhu Castle, Chevy Chase, Md., into an apartment house was intimated yesterday when a petition was filed with the Montgomery County commissioners by B. L. Williams asking re-zoning of the ground on which the castle stands from residential "A" to residential "C" classification.

The commissioners announced a hearing will be held February 24 at 7 p. m. in the Bethesda County Building.

The commissioners appointed Mrs. John Paul Troy as public health nurse at $1,460 a year. The three other public health nurses were voted raises of $60 a year in pay. The nurses receive $500 a year traveling expenses as well. They are Mrs. Katherine Johnson, Miss Margaret Keys and Miss Evelyn Souder.

The commission approved payment of $1,180 costs for trials removed to Howard County. Principal of these was an item of $941.77 for the trial of the Berry Clark embezzlement case in March, 1934, which resulted in a deadlocked jury.

Rezoning of a lot at Leland street and Wisconsin avenue, Bethesda, owned by George P. Sacks, from residential "A" to commercial "D," was approved by the commissioners.

Seven persons became American citizens yesterday in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville, Md.

They are Leslie Charles Mackrill, Hans Peder Christiansen and Wilhelm Blum, all of Bethesda; August and Amalie Gubatz, of Kensington; Ivar Herman Anderson, now residing at Worcester, Mass., and Haakon Carlos Rust, of Takoma Park, Md.

Efforts to obtain a police court for Takoma Park have been revived following a report to the mayor of the town council by the local police that the present staff is inadequate to police the town properly if the officers must continue to appear at trials at the police court in Rockville.

Time lost by officers attending cases in Rockville, the council was told by Royal G. Sherburne, chairman of the police committee, has resulted in an alarming traffic condition in Takoma Park, especially near the public schools.

The remedy, he said, is to have the State Legislature authorize creation of a local police court. Otherwise, additional police must be provided, he warned.

The proposed legislation will be recommended by a committee composed of Sherburne, Corporation Counsel Donald D. Lamond and Town Clerk J. Wilson Dodd.

Three recommendations for improved bus transportation in Chevy Chase have been made by the citizens of Section 3, Chevy Chase. The proposals call for more frequent bus service, additional through buses from Chevy Chase Lake to downtown Washington, and a shuttle service north of Chevy Chase Circle at frequent intervals.

Re-assessment Bill Offered in Virginia

A bill making mandatory the re-assessment of real estate in Arlington and Fairfax Counties, Va., in 1940 and every four years thereafter, was introduced yesterday in the Virginia Assembly by Delegate William D. Medley, of Arlington County.

Under the present State law the re-assessment of real estate is left to the discretion of the local county boards, while the proposed law would make it mandatory. During the past year the boards in both counties voted not to hold the re-assessment because of the expense involved.

Because of the proximity of Arlington and Fairfax Counties to Washington both have experienced building booms during the past two years and several million dollars have been spent in erection of new homes. It has been pointed out that a general re-assessment would remove inequalities now existing in many sections.

Arrest All a Mistake, Maryland Tells Annoyed U. S. Employe

John Drisko, employe of the Bureau of Standards living in Kensington, Md., was notified by the Maryland State Police yesterday that it was all a big mistake, he could go back to Conowingo, Md., and get his car and $10 collateral.

According to Drisko, he was peacefully driving home from Philadelphia with his wife through the snow Sunday afternoon when stopped by Trooper Schaab and Corporal Norris of the State police near Conowingo, Md.

He was operating his car on 1935 Colorado tags. This was against the law, they told him, and, despite his protests, took him to the police station at Conowingo.

He tried to explain to them, he said, that in Colorado one is allowed to drive until February on last year's tags. He even offered to wire Colorado at his expense to prove this, he explained.

However, this failed to move the minions of the law. They said that their headquarters had no information to this effect and they would act only on orders from headquarters. He would have to leave his car, post $10 bond and proceed home as best he could.

Only when he reached his home late that night and was able to get in touch with police headquarters in Baltimore, did he get results. They wired Colorado and discovered it was all a big mistake.

Yesterday Drisko was permitted the inconvenience of returning by bus to Conowingo and retrieving his car and his money. He was wondering last night about the annoyance and expense to which he had been put.

Lee Boulevard Links Planned In Arlington

Major Proposals Include Widening of Roads at Ballston.

ARLINGTON COUNTY
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 500. Clarendon, Va.

With construction of the Lee boulevard from Lyon Park to the Arlington Memorial Bridge expected to be under way with the opening of spring, plans are being completed to make a number of connections with the boulevard, County Manager Roy S. Braden stated last night.

The completion of this boulevard after nine years effort on the part of State and county officials will care for traffic from beyond Fairfax County and a major section of Arlington County, Braden pointed out.

In addition to the completion of the boulevard the county is now planning a comprehensive road building program which will start with spring weather it was revealed at the courthouse yesterday.

Among the major projects to be undertaken will be the widening and surfacing of Wilson boulevard from Jackson street in Clarendon to a point where it meets the Glebe road in Ballston.

In addition to rebuilding many of the county roads, the policy of the county board will include the installation of curb and gutters which will make the rebuilding of a road permanent.

With the road program will go a program of drainage which will greatly aid conditions now existing along North Hudson street in Clarendon from Wilson boulevard in the direction of Key boulevard in Lyon Village. It will eliminate the dangerous deep ditch now existing along that street.

Meeting in annual session last night, the board of directors of the Clarendon Citizens Corporation holding company for the citizens hall dedicated the new hall recently completed on North Irving street as "Clarendon's Community Center."

The body voted to offer the county board the use of land in the rear of the building for a public playground. The offer will be made to the board at its meeting January 30 at the courthouse, it was said.

The Citizens Association was directed to complete plans for the holding of a public reception in the near future.

New officers elected are Walter U. Varney, president; Herbert F. Smith, vice president; John F. Bushing, treasurer, and H. W. Beattie, secretary. Members of the board of directors are Herbert F. Smith, Walter U. Varney, Mrs. Harley Gibson, Mrs. G. B. McKeown, John F. Bushong and L. C. McNemar.

Circle C of the Clarendon Presbyterian Church will serve a benefit roast beef dinner tomorrow night from 5 to 7 o'clock in the church basement.

The Arlington County Monarch Club will hold its weekly luncheon meeting today at 12:30 o'clock at the Washington Golf and Country Club.

Colored workers active in the recent drive for funds for the establishment of a hospital in Arlington County will meet Friday night at the Hoffman-Boston Colored Junior High School in East Arlington. Plans for the group's activities for the coming month will be completed.

Ban Is Sought On Hog-Raising Near Suburbs

Health Officer of Prince Georges Asks Legal Restriction.

Pointing out that there is no law outside of incorporated towns prohibiting hog-raising, Health Officer A. B. Hooton, of Prince Georges County, Md., has recommended to the Board of County Commissioners that the Legislature be presented a bill forbidding hog-raising in suburban residential areas.

Numerous complaints have been received by the commissioners of "bad odor nuisances," especially in the District Heights and Oakland sections. Hooton reported that invariably these conditions have been temporarily remedied by the Board of Health, but that they usually recurred.

The law grants authority to the county commissioners to issue orders for the abatement of such nuisances, and should they continue after due notice, offenders can be fined for subsequent offenses for the same cause in the same place. Hooton points out, however, that no penalty is provided in the public health laws for the first offense.

The twenty-first anniversary of the organization of Kiwanis will be celebrated by the Prince Georges County Kiwanis Club tomorrow night at the Beaver Dam Country Club. Edwin F. Hill, of Washington, Kiwanis international trustee, will be in charge of the program. Dinner will precede the celebration, starting at 6:30 p. m.

Judge Henry H. O'Neill, of Decatur Heights, has been elected consul of Colonial Camp, No. 13999, Modern Woodmen of America, with Andrew F. Gasch, adviser; Carl Fierstein, escort; Albert J. Fierstein, treasurer; Albert W. Fierstein, jr., sentry; Charles W. F. Frerie, watchman, and William Manning, Daniel Pleitner and William Kasulke, trustees.

The Holy Name Society of St. Jerome's Catholic Church, Hyattsville, has elected the following officers: Leo J. Kelly, president; Joseph Weiser, secretary; the Rev. Andrew J. Carey, spiritual director; the Rev. Chester J. Czyz, assistant spiritual director, and J. J. Buckley and J. S. Williams, delegates to the Archdiocesan convention. The offices of vice president and treasurer will be filled later.

Installation of officers was held Monday night by the Men's Club of Pinkney Memorial Protestant Church, Hyattsville. Those inducted were John Fletcher Moulden, president; John Burton, vice president; Elgin Noack, secretary, and William Gasch, treasurer. Gasch was re-elected.

Committee chairmen appointed by President Moulden were: Personal workers, E. J. Bell, jr.; visiting, G. Hodges Carr; membership, John Naylor; hospitality, Waldo Burnside; church school, Noble Owings; program, Harry R. Hall, and publicity, Edward A. Fuller.

The Rev. Lawton Riley addressed the club and there were remarks by the retiring president, Edward A. Fuller. It was decided to hold a first anniversary supper Monday, February 17, in the parish hall. A committee composed of Harry A. Boswell, chairman; William T. Jennings, Burton Moulden and Noack, was named in charge.

The Young Men's Democratic Club of Prince Georges County will hold its monthly meeting tomorrw at 8 p. m. in St. Michael's Hall at Ardmore, as guest of the Twentieth Election District Democratic Club, Henry W. Cord, president. Annual election of officers will be held.

Mrs. Eva W. Busey has been re-elected president of the aid society of the Ardmore United Evangelical Church, with Mrs. Mary Tipton, vice president, and Mrs. Louis Kutsch, secretary-treasurer.

Stockholders of the Seat Pleasant Bank have elected the following as directors for 1936: Mendel Behrend, W. Clinton Brown, J. C. A. Cameron, W. S. Collins, Walter L. Green, Walter J. Hayward, D. G. Joseph, Leo J. Naughton, F. L. Watkins, George N. Wells and Dr. Frederick L. Wight, jr.

Trifling With Farm Relief.

Preparations to rush a substitute for the AAA through the legislative mill, by involved and devious means, suggest that Congress has learned nothing from the fate of earlier expedients of this character. In effect, the Supreme Court has informed Congress that it has no authority to regulate agricultural production. The Administration insists that agriculture must be regulated from Washington in the interests of national recovery. Instead of candidly facing the issue thus raised, Congressmen hasten to devise a new stopgap and to secure its adoption by trickery.

The soil conservation act of 1935 may provide a useful basis for new farm relief legislation. Certainly the preservation of soil fertility is one of the foremost agricultural problems. The only reasonable objection which can be raised to the erection of a new AAA upon this basis is that further deceptive legislation is thus encouraged. When Congressional leaders propose to circumvent the dilemma resulting from the Hoosac Mills decision by appropriating an enormous lump sum and then trying to devise ways and means of spending it, a bigger issue than agricultural subsidies is raised.

It is to be hoped that the majority in Congress will insist upon sound legislative rules to forestall unprecedented legerdemain as well as the attachment of legislative riders to appropriation bills. Every piece of legislation ought to stand or fall upon its own merits. And in this case extensive consideration of the measure's constitutional aspects must enter into the decision of Congress if another tragic failure, involving grave injustice to some groups of farmers, is to be avoided.

The haphazard attitude with which Congress is approaching this issue is a natural result of the psychology of subsidy legislation. There is now no agricultural emergency demanding a headlong plunge into a new experiment. But Congressmen from the farm belt regard immediate restoration of benefits as more pressing than anything else. So far as they are concerned, establishment of an economically sound program of aiding the farmer is less important than keeping a stream of checks flowing.

Whenever a government assumes the responsibility of making any group prosperous by direct outlays from the Treasury, judgment in legislative halls is thus toppled over by politics. That alone is reason enough for a public demand that the new agricultural recovery measure be built upon an honest and a secure foundation.

That Parallel With Jackson.

So thoroughly has the spoils system been re-established under Postmaster General Farley's regime that it has come to be accepted in some quarters as a matter of course. Two years ago the wholesale appointment of Government employes through political influence was excused on the ground of emergency. Now the tendency is to overlook the patronage invasion as a fait accompli. There is grave danger, therefore, that the merit system has been permanently impaired.

Because of the present tendency to ignore this vital issue, Mr. Lawrence Sullivan has rendered a public service by outlining the complete record of the reversion to spoils, in the current issue of the Atlantic Monthly. "Since 1933," he points out, "the percentage of Federal positions subject to competitive examination, in relation to the total of full-time employes in the Executive branch, has declined steadily from month to month, a phenomenon not experienced previously since establishment of the United States Civil Service Commission in 1883."

Under the first Roosevelt 51 per cent of the executive branch's personnel was protected by the merit system. Wilson increased the percentage to 67, Coolidge to 75 and Hoover to 81. Under the present Administration the percentage of jobs filled by the competitive method has fallen to 57. Actually, existing policies are even worse than this comparison suggests. For the number of classified positions subject to civil service regulations has declined by more than 11,000 since 1932. And, according to Mr. Sullivan, only 1 out of every 107 of the new employes — numbering 235,000 — has entered the Government service by way of the merit system.

The pretense that a national crisis necessitated such a departure from the merit system is effectively demolished by reference to President Wilson's use of the competitive method during the war. It is patent that the one purpose of this resort to spoils was to build a political machine. Mr. Farley would probably be the last to deny that he has coolly calculated the number of votes to be expected from this debauch of the Government's personnel system. The unfortunate aspect of the situation is that it takes the public so long to realize that the bulwarks of efficient Government service are being undermined, without the slightest regard for the President's lip-service to the merit system.

The New King.

For the first time since the accession of George III, of inglorious memory so far as this country is concerned, a bachelor prince now succeeds to the British throne. The negative quality of being wifeless is probably the chief topic of conversation regarding Edward VIII throughout the world today. Any man who has won through to the age of 41 unmarried is by that token an object of mingled envy, solicitude, sympathy and concern. These emotions are heavily intensified when the bachelor is also a king.

Nevertheless there is much about Edward VIII which is distinctive aside from the absence of a consort. This he demonstrated yesterday, by flying from the bier of his father at Sandringham to London, thus establishing the precedent of being the first British monarch ever to travel by air. Modern royalty must not merely uphold old traditions, but must also adapt itself to new conditions. And in the latter respect the new king has long shown himself expert.

Whether it is due to his natural temperament, the effect of the war years, or to the changing civilization which he has experienced with all his generation, there is no doubt that Edward VIII will be a king of a new type. He does not compare easily either with his grandfather, who seemed to belong in drawing rooms and courts, or with his father, who combined an essential simplicity of character with a truly royal sense of duty. The new king had just passed his twentieth birthday when the deluge of war swept over Europe. And he knows the indefinable psychology of the post-war world in the way which those who were already mature in 1914 can never know it.

The democracy, the buoyancy, the versatility and abundant vitality of the former Prince of Wales should not make him any the less successful as a king. But, unless his personality is tragically suppressed by the cares of office, these characteristics will certainly make him a different sort of monarch. The youth who tumbled happily from horses, who danced with any girl who caught his fancy, who roamed merrily throughout the world and who was ever of independent mind, is now shortly to be settled in a position in some ways as closely restricted as that of an anchorite. The transition will be exacting for him.

Yet Edward VIII, like all the rulers of his house since George III, has shown that he has great adaptability. So, also, has the majestic office to which he has been called. The flexibility of the English mind is reflected in the flexibility of British institutions. The Commonwealth of virtually independent nations which today hails its new king need never fear that he will seek to impede its natural evolution.

The carefree youth that was the Prince of Wales has gone. But whatever his personal regrets and problems, the man who was the prince will prove himself a worthy custodian of the Crown which, without pressure except upon its wearer, holds together the far-flung governments of the British Empire.

Enough Tracks.

A bill has been introduced in the House to permit horse racing within the District limits. Just why, is not quite clear. There are already tracks at Laurel, Bowie and Baltimore—not to mention Charles Town and Havre de Grace. To install another in the same area would mean to cut seriously into the business of those now operating. More to the point, it would mean inviting still more confusion and crowding into the District, which now has almost more of both than it can bear.

Although a favorable reception is predicted for the bill in the House, the Senate seems to be less enthusiastic about the proposal. Its members seem to realize that there is already more than enough suspense about Washington. Even though the Government is missing a bet—or numerous bets—the Capital can do without pari-mutuel machines in the vicinity of the Supreme Court. Certainly they would be unusually superfluous these Mondays.

A Face Saver.

No flame whatsoever has been found at the base of the smoke raised by those who feared communism in the schools. It would seem only sensible, then, to repeal outright the "teach or advocate" clause which was slipped through the last session of Congress. The rider has been shown not only to contain a threat to academic freedom, but also to be useless as a means of preventing the spread of communism, if there were any to spread.

Those teachers who have no thought of promoting communism readily pledged that they have not done so; while any who might have nursed such ideas would never stop at perjuring themselves by also signing the pledges. The rider was both unnecessary and ineffective.

Nevertheless, Representative Sisson has now introduced a bill not to repeal, but to amend, the rider which forbade school employes to teach or advocate communism. Under the circumstances he is probably well advised in so doing. Already Mr. Blanton, of Texas, has shown signs of again stirring up the whole excitement by urging an investigation of the long administration of Dr. Ballou, superintendent of schools. The politics of the situation apparently demand that something be done to save the faces of those who, with good intentions or otherwise, worked themselves into the embarrassing position of having cried wolf when there was no such animal.

Mr. Sisson's bill in essence provides that no Federal appropriation may be used to pay teachers "advocating communism;" and he adds that this shall "not be construed to forbid or restrict any person from giving instruction concerning * * * the political, economic or social system of any country." There can be no rational objection to this proposal. If a compromise to save face be needed, let this one be adopted. But it does seem a pity to clutter up the already bulging law books of the Nation with another piece of superfluous legislation, except for this one point so utterly unnecessary.

A Workable Housing Policy.

Encouraging evidence that the Administration is working out a large-scale housing program is coming to light from a number of sources. Last week President Roosevelt indicated that he will call a conference to devise means of stimulating construction of low-cost houses. Now it develops that officials of the FHA, the Federal Reserve Board and the Treasury are analyzing proposals to set up a national mortgage association to provide a ready market for Government insured mortgages.

These moves are especially significant because they suggest that an entirely new housing policy is being evolved. To a large extent the building of low-cost dwellings has heretofore been a by-product of the employment program. A relatively small part of the enormous sums appropriated to create jobs has been devoted to housing projects. Not unnaturally, the results have been disappointing.

Several governmental agencies are erecting "model communities" with varying degrees of direct subsidy from the Treasury. These will offer special advantages to a few tenants, but are not likely to encourage similar building by private industry. Indeed, some groups within that industry are complaining that home construction is seriously retarded by such governmental competition.

Shortcomings of the present unco-ordinated experiments are cogently brought out by the report of the Committee for Economic Recovery. That agency would not abolish subsidies, but it would confine all governmental aid to projects for the very lowest income groups. At present the Treasury is suppying funds for homes that families with average incomes could scarcely afford to buy. If the President has come to recognize the need for a more practical approach to the major housing problem, building on a large scale may yet become an important factor in the country's economic recovery.

Mortgage associations have been found useful in a number of countries for mobilization of private capital for construction enterprises. Details of the new Government plan are not yet available, but if it is designed to shift emphasis from Federal subsidies to the organization of private capital for what is essentially a private industry, it is certainly a move in the right direction.

Houses built at the expense of taxpayers must necessarily be few in number. But the scope of a privately financed program under Government sponsorship will be limited only by the potential income of some 7,500,000 families in need of homes.

Hoffman's Blunder.

Gov. Hoffman has taken the extraordinary course of advising the New Jersey Legislature against enactment of old-age pension and unemployment insurance bills on his assumption that the Federal social security act is unconstitutional. Of course, the Governor is at liberty to counsel the State Legislature as he sees fit. But what does he suppose will be gained by entering a field which the legal committee of the Liberty League has pre-empted?

Until the social security act has been passed upon by the Supreme Court it is extremely presumptuous for a State executive to conclude that it contravenes the basic law. There is nothing in the opinions invalidating the NRA and the AAA to justify that estimate, for the social security system has very little in common with these regulatory statutes. In this case the Government does not appear to overreach State powers, but seeks to provide a means of co-operation with the States in the distribution of benefits for groups definitely in need of relief.

In any circumstances Gov. Hoffman's inexpert advice is too flimsy to warrant defeat of a social security program at Trenton. If New Jersey fails to take advantage of the benefits offered through this law, those of her citizens who most need help will be the losers. For the country is definitely committed to the establishment of a social security system of some sort. Even if legal defects should be found in the present law, it would be absurd to assume that they cannot and will not be adequately corrected in co-operation with independent action by the States.

No Profit, No Bootlegger.

From the Memphis Commercial Appeal.

Washington officials report that one effect of the reciprocity treaty with Canada is to start driving the bootlegger out of business. Reduction of the duty on Canadian liquor has lowered the price of that and of the liquors coming from other nations on the most favored list. American producers have let down their prices to meet the competition. In the process the profits available to bootleggers have been cut about in half and Government agents say they are quitting the business merely because the game is no longer worth the candle.

Even if one chooses to question the accuracy of Government reports on the matter, the principle in question is unassailable. The only reason a bootlegger stays in business is to make money, and if there is no large profit, there is no bootlegger.

"1066 And All That."

After Mussolini, What?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Many people are today forced to admit that Mussolini established in Europe a focal point from which the infection of dictatorship spread to many other lands, and that should his technique of threat and blackmail prove successful in his Ethiopian gamble, the last hope for peace in Europe would vanish.

They also agree that he has plunged Italy in an adventure which, even under the best circumstances, is not worth the price and may eventually end in a fatal disaster, after having already brought upon Italy the disgrace of arousing against her the moral conscience of the whole world. Yet, not a few of them are perturbed by the thought that Mussolini's regime may collapse as a result of failure in Ethiopia. They ask: "What next?" and they answer that a Communist revolution would take place in Italy.

This is merely a new version of the old and already exploded myth according to which, 13 years ago, Mussolini saved Italy, and Europe, nay more, the whole world, from bolshevism.

What would happen in Italy if Mussolini were no longer there? A great many things might happen. The least probable of all is a Communist revolution.

Italy is not Russia. Italy is a country predominantly composed of small industrialists, artisans, shopkeepers, profesional groups living on a modest scale, and small landowners. There are in Italy 9,600,000 land-tax-paying units. Any government attempting to expropriate the land or shops of these people would soon be brought back to its senses.

Furthermore, Italy must import from abroad all kinds of raw materials for her industries and vast quantities of foodstuffs. As soon as a Communist regime would arise in Italy, the capitalists of all the other countries would boycott Italy and the Italian communistic regime would collapse within a fortnight under the strain of such "sanctions." The Italian Communists themselves are aware of their inability to bring about a revolution. Only a few weeks ago, at a conference held in Brussels by delegates of Italian anti-Fascist refugees, they declared themselves ready not to oppose the eventual establishment in Italy of a "bourgeois" regime on the condition that it restore political liberties.

If the Fascist regime should come to an end, the task of rebuilding Italy on the economic and moral ruins produced by 13 years of fascism would be formidable. It is a task which holds forth neither promise nor glory to anyone. On the basis of our observation of the Italian situation, we think that a coalition may be formed under the auspices of the Crown and of the Vatican between some of the army chiefs, some of the Fascist leaders unfaithful to Mussolini, and some old pre-Fascist politicans, dusted off, brought down from the attic and groomed for the occasion.

Such a coalition would rely for support on the regular army, the civil service, the police, the Catholic clergy and big business. They would liquidate the Ethiopian war, reinstate representative institutions on the basis of a restricted franchise, restore a very limited degree of political freedom and thus weather the crisis.

This coalition might last for a considerable period of time. But it is doubtful whether it could last very long. As soon as the Italians are granted the smallest amount of freedom of speech and of the press, most of them will ask themselves: "What is the use of having a King who has forfeited all sense of honor?"

The essential duty of the King of Italy was to enforce respect for the constitution upon the conflicting parties. The present King has been the accomplice of Mussolini in destroying the constitution. Antimonarchist currents will develop. The coalition might prove to be merely a bridge toward an Italian republic. Mazzini's dream might become a reality sooner than people realize.

Of course, Italian republicians could not limit their task to the mere formal restoration of personal rights, political liberties and representative institutions. They would have to rebuild the country on the basis of a new economic and social order. They would place under the control of the community those big industrial concerns which cannot live without tariff protection and government subsidies; turn over to tillers of the soil 17,000,000 acres of land now belonging to no more than 12,000 parasitical great landowners; declare null and void the Lateran agreements of 1929; enact a thorough separation of the state from the church and grant equal and unrestricted liberty to all creeds; drastically cut military expenses and put into effect a program of popular education with the greatest possible speed.

If anyone wishes to term this far-reaching change "social revolution" he is entitled to do so, provided he realizes that it would not be a "Communist" revolution, but its exact opposite, since it would create in Italy at least 2,000,000 new small landowners.

Such an Italian democratic republic would again bring Italy within the orbit of the civilized world.

In this atmosphere of liberty and through the process of trial and error common to all peoples, Italy would resume her evolution, which was fairly well-advanced before fascism made havoc with it.

Besides an oligarchic-monarchical and democratic-republican solution, many other unpredictable crossbreed solutions might materialize depending on the manner and the circumstances attendant upon the collapse of Mussolini. One thing is certain: Mussolini is not eternal. Sooner or later, the Italians will have to face the problem: "What next?"

No evil will befall Italy or mankind if this problem is faced today rather than 10 or 20 years hence.

We, the undersigned, always regarded the Fascist rule as inimical to the real welfare of the Italian people and to the peace of the world. Now that the Italian people are confronted with a most dreadful ordeal, and many of those who were the accomplices of Mussolini's crimes ask: "What next?" we answer: "Italy!" We trust in the vitality, moral sanity and common sense of the Italian people. There was an Italy before Mussolini. There will be an Italy after Mussolini—a free Italy within the Commonwealth of Nations. MAX ASCOLI, G. A. BORGESE, MICHELE CANTARELLA, GUIDO FERRANDO, GAETANO SALVEMINI and LIONELLO VENTURI.

The Quotation Sustains Our Point.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The "Bonus Injustice" in the second page column, On the Hustings, and the "Deplorable Precedent" in your editorial columns on page eight of The Post of January 15, would indicate gross ignorance of the bill approved by the Senate Finance Committee yesterday, or a deliberate attempt to distort the truth.

Your statements that the bill "actually offers a substantial reward to veterans who have failed to meet their obligations to the Government, while it would penalize those who have taken their contractual agreements seriously; that veterans who have borrowed on their adjusted compensation certificates and failed to pay interest since September 30, 1931, would have unpaid interest canceled, while on the other hand, the veterans who have conscientiously met their interest obligations would be penalized, for interest already paid would not be refunded," are statements directly contrary to the provisions in section 2 of the bill.

Section 2. "In the case of each loan heretofore made * * * by the administrator of veterans' affairs and/or by any national bank or any bank or trust company * * * upon the security of an adjusted service certificate, any interest unpaid, accrued subsequent to September 31, 1931, that has been or * * * would be charged against the face value of such certificate, shall be canceled * * * Any interest on any such loan payable to any such bank or trust company shall be paid by the Administrator of veterans' affairs."

Recognizing that your paper's consistent efforts to obstruct and defeat this legislation may have brought you much disappointment and much discouragement, may I offer as a discerning opinion that the effectiveness of your statements would be considerably enhanced by a strict adherence to the truth, instead of prejudiced distortion and evasion of facts. G. O. P. "Fairy Tales."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Chairman Fletcher is more to be pitied than censured for his effort to get his dramatization of his "fairy tales" before the public on the national radio systems.

Though backed by "malefactors of great wealth" (as Teddy Roosevelt expresed it) coupled with the futile efforts of the so-called Liberty League, and with the support of 85 per cent of the newspapers of the country, he realizes that he has no issues and no leader to put before the country, he is forced to resort to all sorts of petty tricks to bolster his losing cause.

However, the American people can not be fooled, and the intelligent voter has only to turn to the financial page of any metropolitan newspaper for a refutation of the insidious reflection upon the present Administration.

His efforts are not only amusing, but pathetic.

Pampered Farmers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why all this solicitude for the farmer? Agriculture is out of its swaddling clothes and can take care of itself. Farmers have only to quit loafing at the county seat and mix a little brains with their brawn. To pamper or coddle any group only invites more coddling and pampering.

Farmers are not nearly as bad off as they think they are. Most of them have well-stocked larders with pantry shelves sagging and possess all comforts that could be reasonably wished for. In justice to the great bulk of our population, wheat should not be over 1 cent a pound. This would make possible a 5-cent loaf of bread weighing one pound, with other essentials priced in proportion. Living would be easy, and when living is easy everybody is happy. G. HIGGINS.

Collectivism Needed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Let the American people approach the problem of want in the midst of plenty sensibly, let them think clearly, with the resulting acceptance by them of a proper form of collectivism, a collectivism minus the demerits of the Stalin regime. This will stop the spread of bolshevism. It will never be stopped by the purging of schoolbooks.

If America refuses to meet the issue sanely, then we'll soon be singing the Internationale—or else our arms will be raised to salute a Fascist dictator bent, as is now done in Italy, Germany and Austria, upon preserving capitalism by force.

PLEBEIAN.

The Post Impressionist

The Unknown Quantity

Post Office, Wednesday.

As a member of our native town's School Board, the Major is interested, if not in his own education, at least in such institutions of public instruction as adorn any city he visits. And he has lately visited Washington—again.

While he was here, we saw little of him: after all, we have to earn our living. But he has no sooner returned home than there comes a letter from him, wherein, with customary violence, he expresses some customarily violent opinions upon the free schools of the Capital.

"You've been having," he writes—as if we didn't know it!—"a lot of discussion down there on the teaching of communism. I looked into that. It seems the thing's going to be taught, just as heretofore. I guess you know my opinion about such a procedure, but there doesn't seem any help for it now. About all I can suggest is that if your teachers will t e a c h communism, they should give a little more time to teaching the opposite than they give now.

"However, there's something else I wish they'd teach, too. Algebra!

"I mean it's outrageous to be so slow getting to algebra in their algebra-classes. Algebra's a matter of x's and y's and equations; but the way it is down your way, they begin it by chopping up and mixing in a bunch of other matters like public-health and motion-pictures and police. A Washington class in elementary algebra must be like a horse-race, or a first rehearsal of amateur theatricals, for false starts.

"I picked up one of the algebras you use in Washington. And believe me or not, it starts off like this—I copied some of it down:

"'ELEMENTARY ALGEBRA. Statistical Graphs—We all like the "movies." Pictures tell a story more vividly and more quickly than words. They often enable us to see at a glance things that it might take many words to describe. For instance, it takes a whole sentence to tell how many times as large one dog is as another. But a picture of the two dogs together not only shows this at a glance, but gives us a better idea of the difference.'

"Why I've forgotten more algebra than you can find in that paragraph with a microscope!

"Besides which, it's not true.

"In the first place, there's the scientific fact that there's nothing more deceptive than the eyes, and there's the scientific fact that hardly any two pairs of eyes see the same thing, or see it the same way.

"And in the second place, it does not 'take many words to describe' most things—if you know how to use words. It takes twice as long, and a sight more trouble, to draw a picture or make a photograph.

"Look at that tall statement about those dogs:

"'It takes a whole sentence to tell how many times as large one dog is as another. But a picture of the two dogs together not only shows this at a glance, but gives us a better idea of the difference.'

"It does, does it? I made a practical test of that statement!

"I admit it takes a whole sentence to say, 'Tess the Great Dane is twenty times as big as Fido the Mexican Hairless pup.' But the formation of that sentence doesn't use up any irreplaceable quantity of gray matter on my part and anybody who hears it knows exactly how much bigger than young Fido old Tess really is.

"On the other hand, I drew a picture of Tess and Fido—drew it to scale, measured every pencil-stroke. It took me a whole day—not one of the late lamented NRA days: a whole day. In my picture, the Dane was twenty times bigger than the hairless—to a thirty-second of an inch.

"Then I asked my sister's children how much bigger Tess was—in the picture. One of them said: 'Ten times.' And the other said: 'Thirty.'

"For my part, if I hadn't drawn the picture myself, I couldn't have told, without a tape-measure and an arithmetic, whether the difference was nineteen and three-quarters or twenty and a half."

The Major complains that "the book has pictures of police on parade, a county-fair and a tennis-match." He says there is included "an account of the new Hudson River Bridge, with how much it has cost, how high it is and how much it weighs." He implies that he found all this very interesting, but somewhat remote from algebra. He says:

"There are 332 pages in the book, but you don't get to equations till the fifty-seventh page."

And the Major thinks we should complain about it. "I think you ought to complain in your Column," he concludes. "You ought to complain against the authors leaving out all pictures of motion picture stars, and you ought to insist that, after this, the text-books on geometry begin with a couple of chapters on draw-poker."

They Loved Him.

London, Jan. 21.

IT'S an odd fact that the people of the United States, who are forever mooing and whining about love in their songs, have nobody whom they love, whereas this queer, contradictory race called the British actually loved the little wasted and exhausted man who died of fatigue more than anything else last night.

A Hoover rides the shoulders of the crowd to the White House to be run out of town four years later in ignominy. A Roosevelt comes to office warming the country with the sunshine of a big broad grin and cheering the people with his confidence only to be denounced and reviled before his term is out. Babe Ruth put it in a capsule when he said in his heyday, "You're a hero today and a bum tomorrow, so what the hell?"

• • • •

BUT if you had stood in the crowd around the gates of Buckingham Palace last night you would have felt that it was different sentiment which was expressed by the silence of 10,000 Londoners gathered to wait for the last bulletin after they learned the King was dying.

They began clustering around the little glass-framed bulletin board at dusk. By 10 o'clock there were 5,000 or so, the front rank clinging to the bars of the courtyard. By 11 o'clock, when the file of grenadiers came along, stomping hard and loud on the payment for the ceremony of changing the guard, it was necessary for them to go single file and for bobbies to open a path for them.

• • • •

THE grenadiers under their tall fuzzy shakos repeated the childish rigmarole and the new guards fell out with incredibly jerky, dehumanized movements, strictly according to the book, to take their stations and go through the ridiculous pretense of guarding the person of a tired little man who at that very moment lay unconscious in a castle 100 miles away breathing his last.

The people around Buckingham were not of a mind to do King George any harm. They whispered when they spoke and in three hours among the dense crowd not one frivolous remark was uttered. Across the road another 1,000 stood on the steps of the gaudy memorial statue commemorating the reign of his grandmother, Victoria, and flash bulbs flickered like summer lightning in the cold, damp winter night, giving glimpses of the naked trees.

A cockney with a muffler long enough to lynch him wheeled up his bike at the curb and asked, "Is it true that His Majesty has passed away?" It's our tradition to believe that this way of speaking is bound to have been servility, but his tone was independent when the bobby told him he couldn't go on with the bike, and he turned to say that a man had a right to inqu'ire the "'ealth of 'Is Majesty the King."

• • • •

THRE were people in the gathering as poor as poverty, snuffling and shuffling toward the little bulletin board, and they all spoke in whispers and mentioned the dying man as though he were some very dear personal friend. Although he died just before midnight it was 12:40 before a man emae out of the place and hung up a bulletin that the King was dead. At that men in the front row took off their hats and those behind, seeing this done, understood and took their hats off, too. A news photographer lit a fuse like a Roman candle, which burned two minutes, casting a bright glare over the crowd, while movies ground. The grenadiers continued to walk their posts, stomping heels on their square turns, now guarding the person of the new King, who likewise was more than 100 miles away.

• • • •

A NEWSBOY appeared with a canned edition of the Daily Express with howling head, "The King Is Dead; Long Live the King!" He was silent himself as he dealt papers right and left, and suddenly it dawned on the observer that the crowd had not uttered a sound all evening. Not an automobile had squawked in a constant file of traffic, and the only noise had been a restrained ring of an ambulance bell coming to carry away the man with the heart attack. They didn't weep and no patriot with a streak of ham in him had thrown a fit, as might have been expected, and, finally, they did not sing "God Save the King."

They just broke and went away, but at 3 a. m. Englishmen were still arriving in cars or afoot to read the bulletin as the grenadiers strode their posts in their pathetic military manner.

The taxi driver who took me home, conversing through the window, said he had been a good King and deserved his rest and added he never envied His Majesty his job.

Sharpe Asks Support For President's Ball

C. Melvin Sharpe, chairman of the ticket committee for the President's Birthday Ball on January 30, last night made an earnest appeal to the public to support the ball. Sharpe spoke from radio station WMAL.

The speaker called attention to the epidemic stage of infantile paralysis reached last year, causing cancellation of the International Boy Scouts' Jamboree and casting a pall of dread over a half dozen States. He told of the unceasing battle against this plague that is waged by Children's Hospital and pointed out that this hospital will receive 70 per cent of the funds derived from the ball, the other 30 per cent going to the Warm Springs Foundation.

Britain Faces Strike As Miners Demand Higher Pay.

By Edward Acheson.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

THE threatened coal strike, which in the next two weeks bids fair to bring down the whole shaky structure of British "recovery," is not in itself an incurable disease. But it is a symptom. And it is the symptom of a malady which has now become chronic, which has now passed the point of response to medical treatment. Unless a major operation is performed, and speedily, on the fundamental economic structure of the industry there is every indication that, far from "continuing a satisfactory recovery," England is steadily and surely approaching a crisis.

Superficially the problem is extremely simple. The Mineworkers Federation makes two demands, that wages be generally increased 50 cents a day and that the increase be negotiated on a national, rather than a district basis.

To which the Mining Association replies that "experience has shown that national agreements give rise to national disagreements." They invite the miners to district meetings, which the miners refuse to attend. And finally, in rebuttal, it is pointed out that 50 cents per miner per day comes to just $93,000,000 a year while the total "profits" of the industry in 1934 were only $10,000,000.

• • • •

THE latter allegation is perfectly true. And it is this unhappy truth that raises the present dispute far above the category of "mere labor squabbles" and presents the Nation squarely with a basic economic problem of the first importance, and of enduring importance.

For there isn't the slightest prospect even in general recovery that the demand for British raw coal will ever again permit of the former scale of employment in the industry. The export market is lost irretrievably; technical efficiency has effected an enormous saving even on the coal used domestically; and, more important still, alternative sources of power have been developed. Obviously the now-unemployed are unemployable. Admittedly the wage scale is "scandalously low." But the industry simply can't afford to hire more men or pay higher wages. Those are the facts, which no one is facing. Instead of grasping the full significance of what has happened and is happening, the whole question is being treated as an annoying but familiar type of "trouble with the miners." This is quite apparent from the negotiations which have already taken place.

The Mineworkers Federation presented its demands to the Mining Association. The Mining Association argued, denied, presented statistics, but in effect rejected the proposals. The question was raised in the House of Commons and a surprisingly wholehearted support for the miners' cause was unearthed. Both parties to the dispute thereupon appealed to the government for a subsidy or some such form of financial assistance. This, the Government through Capt. Crookshank, the Secretary for Miners, refused and in no uncertain terms. Furthermore, Capt. Crookshank seized the opportunity "to warn the miners of the grave responsibility which they would incur by any hasty action." Mr. Joseph Jones, the president of the Miners Federation, replied with an equally grave statement putting the responsibility on the Government.

AT this point the country became alarmed. And well it might. Demands were heard "that the Prime Minister intervene at once to prevent a conflict which if allowed to go on, would be devastating to the whole nation and fatal to the depressed areas." But it is difficult to see what type of intervention, short of complete reorganization under government direction, is possible, except as a palliative. And in this instnace the British predilection for not crossing bridges is of no avail. The question of the future of the coal mines is one which will not solve itself no matter how steadfastly it is assumed to be non-existant.

Perhaps, unfortunately, the present negotiations are in remarkably capable hands. Naturally it is in the interests of the Government to find an acceptable compromise. The danger lies in discovering a "solution" in half-measlres when only whole measlures drastically applied can effect a cure. Capt. Harry Frederick Comfort Crookshank can be counted on to handle the situation if anyone can. He's an outstandingly capable man, a very good advertisement for the much publicized "British system."

A former guardsman with diplomatic experience in Washington, he has at 42 achieved a surprisingly intimate knowledge of mines and mine working. He speaks very well in the house, where he and Sir Austin Chamberlain usually boast the only pair of top hats. He has a splendid war record he has plenty of money and is further generously equipped with a sense of humor.

They Ask 50 Cents More.

In fact, he would seem to be the ideal man for the job.

But the question remains whether it isn't possible in this instance to be too ideal. A facile peace will enhance the reputation of the Secretary for Mines and permit the cancer in the coal industry to eat further into the economic structure of the country as a whole.

• • • •

NEITHER negotiation, tact nor diplomacy will find an extra $93,000,000 in British coal today. This is obvious from the two steps which have already been taken. The price of domestic coal has been advanced, and the Government has decided to nationalize the royalties paid on production.

The latter decision was a barefaced political trick, but a characteristically British gambit. Before the election the Tories promised the "unification of royalties," but assiduously did not explain what "unification" meant. Directly after the election had been won, they revealed that "unification" meant government purchase and ownership of royalties—a thoroughgoing Socialist measure. Hence once again the Conservatives have sponsored and made their own a progressive step which could not be avoided. But the inference is clear, and will become unmistakable when the government explains how much and with what money they mean to pay the 4,000 "rentiers" who now draw 12 cents a ton on coal which is mined thousands of feet below ground because they own the fields thousands of feet above.

A step toward partial solution of the present impasse—but a step which apparently does not appeal to the Tory government—would be to buy out the royalty holders, adding the cost to the national debt, and apply the 12 cents a ton to wage increases. This would, of course, represent grossly preferential taxation, but England is or should be quite used to that by this time.

However, a raise of 50 cents a day means that something in the neighborhood of 40 cents a ton must be found, and even by saddling the taxpayer with the capitalized value of the royalties, there still remains 28 cents per ton to be found.

Chronic Dislocation Of Basic Industry Vexes Nation.

• • • •

IN all probability a hearty "British compromise" will be reached under Capt. Crookshank's expert management. The miners will take less—possibly on a district agreement basis—the association will go up—and the taxpayers generally will go on supporting the unemployed in the depressed areas.

Until—and this point is universally overlooked—the graph of world production begins markedly to rise. For over five years the tempo of industrial activity, especially in Germany and the United States, has been slowed to a pace more nearly approximating England's decelerated and decelerating ability to adjust her industrial structure to modern conditions. In this sense the depression has been a decided advantage to Great Britain; she has been able to better her relative position. But by perpetuating an anachronism into the new era of competition, the country may be fatally handicapped.

The problem, then, which was originally raised by a group of workers wanting more money, immediately translates itself into a national social controversy.

Presumably the industries involved in the manufacture of coal derivities could, were their profits pooled, contribute handsomely toward the support of the miners' wage-scale. But those businesses are private property. The only way to secure their profits for purposes other than their own is to nationalize them. And that is Socialism of the most Stafford-Crippsian hue.

• • • •

YET the alternatives are equally unsavory. Refuse the wage increase and a national strike is called. Break it and there remains the ghastly social problem of the depressed areas where men are not only out of work but are disintegrating under the realization that there never will be work. If the strike is called and can't be broken then only the better pits can reopen at the higher wage figure and the dole is paid from taxpayers' money to the resultant unemployed.

Oil from coal is a barely possible solution. Today it can be produced, if sufficiently subsidized to compete with the foreign product. Whether a million or a hundred million dollars spent on research might develop a sound industry and solve the problem of the Black Areas is obviously a gamble. Certainly it is a chance worth taking because the stakes for England are almost infinitely high. But it is a gamble which only the nation can afford to pay. Private owners are either bankrupt—or about to be. Even the Conservatives are beginning to admit that the coal industry is a problem for national control if ever such a problem existed. Yet so timorous of change is the present temper of the country that almost any concession will be offered to keep intact the status quo.

The difficulty is that, in the coal industry as now organized, there is nothing left to concede. The cupboard is barer than the bone that isn't in it. And the problem remains, a problem embracing the lives of a million solid but scarcely docile citizens and the basic industry of the country. Certainly the most wrong-headed way to go about a "solution" is to postpone it by fostering separate little district bickers.

The Once Over

Senate Probe.

("Mr. Morgan talked about grouse shooting on the Scottish moors. 'There is nothing like the August weather in Scotland,' he said. 'The purple heather is all around and the air'—here words failed him."—News item.)

Q. Let us get down to the facts about Scotch weather, Mr. Morgan.

A. Very well.

Q. You say there is nothing like it in August; what is your motive in making that statement?

A. I have none, other than a desire to be fair about the weather in Scotland in August.

Q. Isn't it a fact that your firm practically controls Scotch weather not only in August but all through September?

A. No sir. It is an old established policy of our house not to try to control weather anywhere anytime.

• • • •

Q. Isn't it so that you have always been pro-Scotch weather?

A. I think you misinterpret my attitude.

Q. Wouldn't the files of J. P. Morgan & Co. show that Mr. Lamont back in 1918 said there was no weather in August like the weather at Harvard?

Q. You just said, "the purple heather is all around and the air"—and then you stopped. Why didn't you finish the statement?

A. I don't know exactly.

Q. Don't you think it was pretty suspicious of you?

A. No, you see . . .

Q. Do you go around making unfinished statements Mr. Morgan?

A. Certainly not.

Q. I think it highly sinister, if I may say so, for a banker to stop right in the middle of a sentence about the air in Scotland. We will let it stand on the record so posterity may draw its own conclusions.

A. I have no wish to conceal anything from this committee about the air in Scotland. All my personal papers on the matter are open to you.

• • • •

Q. You say the purple heather is all around and 'r o u n d and around . . .

A. No, you're thinking of that song about the cornet.

• • • •

Q. Mr. Morgan, what is a grouse?

A. It is a bird found on the Scottish moors.

Q. In August?

A. Oh, not only in August. In many other months.

Q. Why didn't you say so? Are you trying to mislead this committee?

A. Of course not.

Q. Didn't you say that there was no grouse like a Scotch grouse in August especially in the p u r p l e weather?

A. No sir.

Q. As a matter of fact aren't there just as good purple Augusts in the United States, Mr. Grouse?

A. What was that question?

• • • •

Q. I wouldn't remember. Let me refresh your recollection. Didn't you say back in 1916 that the Swiss grouse in April were purple enough for anybody, and that nobody would dispute it except newspapermen and other idiots?

A. That was before I knew them so well. I now apologize.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

Novels of the Day.

MISS BAUM'S "Grand Hotel" and Mr. Maugham's "Rain" give us two lines of definition in placing Helen Ashton's latest novel, "Dust Over the Ruins" (Macmillan, $2.50). The first named, so very convenient a tag for implying an assorted group of people confined in their action to one single locale, will express Miss Ashton's ground plan—five characters thrown together at a "dig," or archeological excavation project, in northern Arabia. "Rain," on the other hand, is equally serviceable as a symbol of some outside force at work upon all the characters, wearing them down, grinding off the gloss, exposing them inexorably. And in "Dust Over the Ruins," instead of Mr. Maugham's tropical downpour, we have the heat and blinding light and cruel isolation of the desert.

But these are ABCs, giving us no hint of the very real strength and maturity of Miss Ashton's novel. For with such simple materials she has made an admirable piece of work.

Young Robin Cary, a youth who is naive and idealistic enough to be entirely plausible, is out on his first "dig." In command at Wady Haroun is Sir William Crane, a fussy and old school septuagenarian; at his right hand we find Miss Olwen Hughes, vastly capable secretary with the not unsurprising frustrated heart, and very much at Sir William's left hand is his new assistant, the dour, volcanic, trouble making Evan Mederith. And to this quatrain Evan's wife—who, we can find for ourselves, is lovely and magical as only the Welsh can be—and we have the ingredients for subtle and deep searching drama.

• • • •

NOT that the conflicts avoid obviousness. Miss Ashton has certainly not strained for originality in making Robin fall delicately in love with Valentine Meredith, in making him hate Evan as a youth would, in having Miss Hughes a childhood and frustrated sweetheart of Evan's, and in depicting Valentine as something of a cozening minx with the men. But again, as has been said, these simplicities are but used to lead us into more revealing channels. Robin's baptism into understanding is as deftly done as it is sure in its psychology. Valentine and Evans, always at daggers' points of nerves, always indissolubly bound together, is a picture of consummate accuracy. For lack of the old mechanics of drama—aside from an attack by the natives, and a near-drowning in a flooding stream (and even these are all but confined to their deep effects on the party)—for lack of melodrama, we are treated to an interplay of personality which is distinguished enough in treatment to need no paprika.

Miss Ashton is not overly ambitious. "Dust Over the Ruins" pretends to no great scope. But in the desolate valley of Wady Haroun she has set a little drama which will hold the discriminating reader's best attention. Her style alone, smooth, ingenious, and fitted quietly to her material, lifts this novel into the higher ranks of the season's fiction.

PHIL STRONG has returned with gusto to his beloved Iowa. In the pages of "Career" (Harcourt Brace, $2), he takes us up and down the streets of Pittsville, shows us the kindly storekeeper who is father-confessor to the town, the amiable banker who needs must be called a villain, the banker's handsome daughter and storekeeper's stalwart medico son in love with each other, and an array of town characters all the way down to the humorous bootlegger and the town drunk—all likable, homespun, rather easily characteristic. There is a run on the bank for climatic drama, and the storekeeper comes to the rescue with something of the same unction with which vaudeville teams used to wave the flag to bring the audience up-standing.

Here is all praise of the homely virtues, all manner of beguiling local color. Mr. Stong paints Iowa in very pretty tints, indeed—one is not expected to find anything really sad or really bad. As long as rose-colored spectacles are in vogue, Mr. Strong can go right on writing this comfortable sort of book. He does it very well.

IF you like your hero to get up to his neck in escapades and to go dashing all over the landscape, you will relish Arthur Behrend's "The House of the Spaniard" (Doubleday Doran, $2). Young David Grey may have thought that being a Liverpool shipping clerk augured no especial adventure, but what with a Spanish revolutionist as the head of the firm, a mysterious house on the marshes of the Mersey, and a provocative heroine, there follows a train of activity to satisfy even the devotee of John Buchan. As samples, a headlong chase across the Pyrenees and a mountain top in Spain besieged by the royalists may be trusted to lead you on. Decidedly entertaining.

A London doctor in bad grace with his profession, and his long search for revenge against the colleague who implicated him in a murder charge, provide the theme of Sidney Fairway's novel, "The Long Tunnel" (Doubleday Doran, $2). A. J. Cronin adored the book, but it seems rather extravagant and gushy—as the over-the-counter English novel so often is. Read it if you have a penchant for tales about doctors, but go back to Miss Ashton's "Dust Over the Ruins" if you want to have your taste cleared by means of true literary skill.

2,500 Building Workers To Go on Strike Today

New York, Jan. 21 (AP).—James J. Bambrick, president of a building workers union, tonight announced that 2,500 union members in 200 buildings in the garment and fur district will be called out on strike "sometime tomorrow."

Bambrick said the union "got no place" in its demands to the realty interests for better wages, hours and working conditions.

The strike will be called unexpectedly, Bambrick said. The same procedure was used in 1934 when a short strike of building employes tied up some of Manhattan's downtown skyscrapers.

Buildings which will be affected by the strike, he said, were not covered by union contracts.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

High Administration officials yesterday contended the Supreme Court, in refusing to reconsider its decision in the rice millers' processing tax cases, struck a serious blow at the uninterrupted collection of Federal taxes, with the possibility that the normal functioning of the Government might be impaired as a result of a flood of injunction suits.

In expressing their concern over the court's curt dismissal of its motion Monday for a reconsideration of the processing tax decision, Administration spokesmen indicated their belief that the ruling may have repercussions far beyond the field of farm relief.

Cummings Concurs.

President Roosevelt's concern over the decision was indicated at his semi-weekly press conference when he said that the court in the present case had apparently reversed a decision which it rendered in 1922 upholding the validity of a statute in existence since 1867 barring injunction suits against the collection of taxes. Thus it would appear the court now holds that statute invalid, the President pointed out.

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings held the same view and expressed fear that "resort to injunctions to restrain the Government from collection of taxes would be made with increasing frequency" and that "injunction warfare in the courts against any tax we may pass" would be the result.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace also joined in the Administration effort to concentrate attention on the high tribunal's ruling. In a radio broadcast on the farm situation he said he did not question the legality of the court's ruling, but that "I certainly do question the justice of it."

Reed Refers to Brief.

His objection to the court's decision was based chiefly on his contention that the return of $200,000,000 of impounded processing taxes to those who paid it would "solely enrich the processors"—the expropriation of money from the consumers for benefit of the processers, the very thing condemned by the court in invalidating AAA, he contended.

Solicitor General Stanley Reed, the Government's spokesman at the bar of the Supreme Court, let the brief which he filed with the tribunal Monday and which it quickly rejected with unprecedented speed—present his views.

In that brief he maintained that the importance of preserving the rule established in Bailey vs. George—the 1922 case mentioned by the President—"cannot be overemphasized" and went on to assert that "any impairment of the force of that decision or departure from the principle of Section 3224 (the 1867 statute cited by the President) would destroy essential safeguards to the orderly and uninterrupted collection of all Federal taxes and imperil the normal functioning of government."

Incidentally, it was apparent yesterday that the Administration was anxious to have the country understand fully the implications and effects of the Supreme Court decision upholding injunction suits in the rice millers' cases, even though it was conceded that probably nothing could be done about it, except for the court to clarify its decision if it is misunderstood. Some thought the Administration objective was to force the court to justify its action.

Statute Bars Suits.

The present controversy revolves around a statute passed by Congress in 1867 which provided that "no suit for the purpose of restraining the assessment or collection of any tax shall be maintained in any court"—language which the Government's attorneys contend is clear and straight to the point.

This statute would not bar a taxpayer from suing to recover taxes which he had paid on the grounds that they were illegally assessed against him. The purpose of the prohibition was to protect the Government against delays in the collection of revenue and against impairment of its functions pending lengthy litigation. It has been termed the "pay and litigate later" policy.

In 1922 the Supreme Court had occasion to pass on the applicability of that statute in a suit brought by Senator Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, then collector of internal revenue for that State, against a man named George, doing business as the Vivian Cotton Mills.

Asked Injunction.

George sought in the Federal District Court in North Carolina an injunction restraining the collector from levying and selling a piece of his property to satisfy a tax of 10 per cent of his net profits assessed against him because he employed children under certain ages, as provided in the Federal child labor law. He contended this law was unconstitutional, since the Federal Government had no authority to regulate labor conditions within a State. The district court granted the injunction.

When the case reached the Supreme Court, that tribunal already had declared the child labor law unconstitutional. Chief Justice William Howard Taft, speaking for an unanimous court, declared in a brief opinion that "the averment that a taxing statute is unconstitutional does not take this case out of the section (the prohibition of 1867)."

"There must be some extraordinary and exceptional circumstance not here averred or shown to make the provisions of the section inapplicable," he asserted, and went on to add that George had not exhausted all legal remedies available to him, since payment could have been made under protests and action to recover taken. The injunction issued by the lower court was ordered dismissed.

Tax Was Voided.

On the same day—May 15, 1922—the Chief Justice speaking for the court handed down a decision in another case arising under the Child Labor Law. In that case—Bailey vs. Drexel Furniture Co.—the furniture company had paid the tax or penalty assessed against it and had brought suit to recover the money. The court ruled that the tax was "an unconstitutional exaction" and that the sum paid should be refunded.

In all of the 2,000 cases in which injunctions were sought to restrain collection of AAA processing taxes, the Government cited the statute of 1867 and the Bailey vs. George decision—but out of the total only 262 injunctions were refused. It also cited this statute and the Bailey vs. George decision in its arguments before the Supreme Court when the rice millers' case originally was argued.

But in its opinion in that case the court did not mention the Bailey vs. George opinion, upholding the injunction on the ground the "exaction" was unconstitutional. So the Government returned to the court on Monday with a petition for a rehearing, pointing out that "the parallel between Bailey vs. George and the case at bar is striking" and went on to assert that in each it was alleged that:

"The exaction was unconstitutional.

Collection Threatened.

"The collection of the exaction was threatened.

"The collection would result in irreparable damage.

"An injunction should be granted permanently enjoining collection."

"In each case," the Government continued, "the collector relied upon the provisions of Section 3224 (the 1867 prohibition) as depriving the courts of jurisdiction; in each case there was an adequate remedy at law consisting of a suite for refund after payment; in each case the decision was reached in the light of a holding that the imposing statute was unconstitutional; in each case the exaction had not been paid and the decision that the imposing statute was invalid effectively prevented a collection thereafter.

"A departure from the rule in Bailey vs. George is not required to insure the return of impounded funds to the taxpayer if the court desires to accompolish that result."

Fears Other Courts.

The Solicitor General added that "as Bailey vs. George is not mentioned, it seems certain that the opinion in the present cases will be construed by other courts, in cases raising the constitutionality of tax legislation, as overruling that decision."

The Supreme Court dismissed that petition two and a half hours after receiving it Monday, without a written opinion. Thus the Government counsel are in the dark whether the court intended to set aside the Bailey vs. George opinion or whether the court found a distinction between that case and the one brought by the rice millers.

They fear, however, that the lower courts will take the action of the Supreme Court to mean that Bailey vs. George may hereafter be ignored and that many persons affected by existing taxes, such as the social security, railroad retirement and bituminous coal conservation levies, will be encouraged to seek injunctions restraining the collection of those taxes on the ground that those acts are invalid. Thus the Federal revenue from those taxes would be shut down pending the litigation.

Just as important, they fear also that whatever form of taxes which Congress may adopt to pay for the new farm program will immediately be attacked in the courts through injunctions and that the Government will be deprived of revenue to carry on the program until it is finally decided whether it is constitutional.

Low-Cost Housing Defended by Ickes

By the Associated Press.

A belief that private capital can not furnish new homes for "the lowest income groups" was expressed yesterday by Secretary Ickes in discussing housing administration studies of methods for obtaining co-operation of large banks and real estate mortgage houses.

To date, the PWA housing division has built only apartments. Ickes said the "proper field" for the Federal Housing Administration was lending money at low interest rates to people who are able to finance their own homes, or to put up buildings with suitable rent for these people.

Ickes said "it was never intended" that the PWA would enter the lowest income field, and emphasized that "there has been no conflict between FHA and our own low-cost housing."

Williams Prominent Here.

S. Clay Williams, who yesterday accidentally shot William A. Law, one of his closest friends, has been a prominent figure in Washington since the early days of the New Deal.

When Gen. Hugh Johnson retired as administrator of NRA, Williams, as chairman of the National Industrial Recovery Board, moved into his office. Prior to this he had been a member of the industrial advisory board of NRA.

A native of Mooresville, N. C., Williams was a star football player at Davidson College. He began his career as a lawyer in Greensboro, N. C., later moving to Winston-Salem.

Substituting for an older lawyer, he won a case for the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., and eventually became general counsel for that firm. He is now chairman of the board of the Reynolds company.

ator Joseph Robinson, Arkansas, Democrat and Senate majority leader; Senator Bankhead and Senator Smith, Representative Jones, Speaker Byrns, Mastin G. White, Agriculture Department solicitor, appointed Senator Robinson spokesman. He said:

"The conference affirms its conclusions of several days ago, and a bill to be operative for a period of two years will be introduced in the Senate, probably by Senator Bankhead, and in the House, probably by Representative Jones. It will be new legislation, but an amendment to the soil act."

Put Up to Morgenthau.

Senator Bankhead, asked where the Government would get the money for the $500,000,000 program, said:

The President at his press conference shortly afterward confirmed the conference agreement.

Attorney General Cummings said the question of levying new taxes to replace the processing taxes was discussed only "incidentally" at the White House. He said he was "confident" that some means could be discovered to eliminate "unfairness" to processors who had paid taxes into the Treasury in recent months while others sought injunctions against payment.

The Administration substitute of the figure of $237,544,550 as the amount due farmers who signed 1935 AAA contracts in good faith, which would be additional to the $500,000,000 to be requested by the Bankhead bill, was embodied in a letter from Chester Davis to Senator McNary, the Republican leader.

This substitute would authorize making $236,185,000 available for rental and benefit payments and accompanying administrative expenses, and a sum equal to the unexpended balance of duns heretofore established in the sugar control act—$1,359,550.

Secretary Wallace, speaking in a radio broadcast yesterday over a national network, said:

"I will admit . . . that it seems to me that the time has come when long-suffering patience calls for practical and immediate action by the Congress and the Administration. I say this because of the news that processing tax collections impounded by the courts are now to be immediately returned to the processors."

Thus in a direct onslaught on the recent Supreme Court AAA decision the Secretary took to the public the problems of the farm population of the Nation, saying of the Monday decision that the processing taxes must be returned:

"I do not question the legality of the action, but I certainly do challenge the justice of it."

Charges Contradiction.

Charging that the Supreme Court's latter ruling contradicted a policy set forth in the AAA decision and that it "ignored" an express wish of Congress he went on:

"In its decision in the Hoosac Mills case . . . the majority of the court expressed disapproval of the idea of 'expropriation of money from one group for the benefit of

On Capitol Hill the House Appropriations Committee revealed an amendment to a deficiency bill which would make a specific appropriation to 1935 cotton subsidies.

Grants of not more than 2 cents a pound were to be paid from the 30 per cent of customs duties set aside for the AAA. About $50,000,000 would be required, it was understood.

The Budget Bureau's recommendation for funds of $4,250,000 to enforce the potato control law was cut by the committee to $1,250,000.

Revue at Lotus Draws Acclaim Of Customers

'Best of Winter,' Chorus Fans, Critics Watching 'Cocktails of 1936.'

By Chanticleer.

The boys with the long gray beards and an eye for pulchritude and the terpsichorean arts sat on the edges of their chairs at the Lotus through the opening of "Cocktails of 1936." When the last bow had been taken the jury was polled and the unanimous vote was: "the best of the winter revues." That is, thus far, because Dick Lam has a way of shooting for still bigger and better tops for the Lotus floor.

In Pearl Dawn and Guy Bertran, the Lotus has leased the smartest and fastest dance novelty seen in the home precincts in some time. Inauspiciously enough, Dawn and Bertran make their initial appearance to the dainty strains of a minuet—Colonial flirtation as the motif.

But hi-de-ho How they slay the patrons a little later with an improvement on Harlem's favorite Lindy Hop. It's a fast, novelty routine from beginning to end, aided and abeted by smart costuming and a very contagious comedy exuberance on the part of both members of the team.

And as for the "Six Dainty Cocktail Shakers" (six little chorus hoppers, to you), there's a specialist in every pair of dancing shoes. As a rule every line of dancing gals has a slick tap dancer or acrobatic specialist. But the "Cocktail Shakers" are all specialists, from Pat and Betty, who crack things open with a rhumba, to Louise Augustus, in an Indian maiden number.

As though this weren't sufficient for one big show, the Stanleys are added for comedy effect. It's all a little rough on the Stanleys what with having fingers poked in eyes and faces getting slapped. Slightly reminiscent of the beatings Ted Healey's stooges used to take.

The there's Ruby and Miriam in a "challenge dance duel" and Helen Lake in a toe specialty, topped off with diminutive Benny Keyes, a little ink spot from Harlem, in a bit of typical cullud stepping.

For your dancing, Bill Strickland and his Capitolians. Al Elmer Norton runs the show and has more fun than any three other emmcees you may name. The Lotus own Judy Ellington takes the spotlight to sing "Moon Over Miami."

Pete Macias changed the Macias mind at a late minute with the result that Grace Shannon, pianist, and Walter Doe (sounds like a fictitious name in any language), tap expert, are held over this week at the Heigh-Ho Club . . . The bands play it, the customers sing it, the country goes nutz over it—and now Renee and Renato have built a dance routine on it. You're right, it's "The Music Goes 'Round and 'Round." Renee and Renato and Mary Kent are high-lighting the week's attraction at the La Paree. The Six Manhattan Flashes for chorus numbers.

It happened at the Cafe Samovar. A well-dressed woman came in, handed a piece of manuscript to Johnny and Jerry and asked them to play it for her. The boys rehearsed it in the back room, later played it for her. She said she liked it—and explained she was the composer. She left, saying she intended to have it published. The boys liked it, too, but they don't yet know who she is.

There's comedy, expert dancing and grand singing in the Shoreham's show, held over this week. Ruthania and Malcolm are back, which is enough in itself. Rosini and Company have been added; magic stuff from the Far East . . . It looked like "Lafayette, we are here" when the American Legion took over the Checker Board Lounge at the Lafayette the other night.

The Ambassador Hi-Hat's Hawaiians have a new member—Gilfred Brown, who plunks solemnly on a bass fiddle. Gilfred adds depth to the unit, giving the impression of a much larger band performing . . . Those waitresses at the Mayfair Cafe of All Nations are serious about the countries they represent, as pictured on the murals. Now they've turned silent!

"Charmonka," the famed Russian skit portraying the woebegone troupe of street entertainers in Moscow, is the hit of a hit week at the Russian Troika. Pauline Achmatova directed the sketch, plays the part of the dancing girl. It's only one of the many items on the Troika's floor offering . . . The parrot of the popular Parrot Tea House has a new companion. The Parrakett Snack Bar now is open.

Jimmy Harris, pianist at the Maryland Club Gardens, took his composing pad in hand and in forthright manner produced the sad story of the poor little boy with no papa and no mama. He'll do it for you if you ask . . . Consuela Gonzales, Matt Windsor's singing sensation at the Club Volga Boatman, and Eddie Stanisloff and Patricia Shea, dancers, are responsible for the Manhattan flavor to the floor attraction this week.

The stout-hearted taste you'll never mistake

No substitute will ever fool you if you really know the ardent taste of Old Overholt American straight rye whiskey, bottled in bond under U. S. Government supervision, the requirements of which, as to full 100 proof, storage in barrels, and freedom from addition of younger spirits, are more rigid than those of any other country in the world.

There's no other whiskey flavor like it. It's literally different as day and night because it is rich-laden with the pungent zest of real rye.

In stout-staved casks for at least four and a half years, every ruddy drop breeds rich, tasty mellowness. That's whiskey for a hearty appetite.

Ireland Forgets Past to Mourn Dead Monarch

Animosities Put Aside as All Other Nations Pay Tribute; Pope Prays.

By the United Press.

International enmities, which only a few weeks ago threatened to burst into actual hostilities, were forgotten yesterday as the world mourned King George V.

Virtually every royal court in the world announced varying periods of mourning. Salutes in honor of the dead monarch ranged from firing of guns at Hyde Park in the heart of London to beating of tom-toms in the heart of the African jungle.

Fascist Italy, whose recent tense relations with Great Britain caused international speculation over an Anglo-Italian clash, was among the first nations to mourn King George.

Premier Benito Mussolini ordered flags at half-staff on all public buildings throughout Italy until sunset on the day of George's funeral. King Victor Emanuel ordered immediate 15 days' court mourning.

Ireland Joins in Tribute.

At the same time, Ireland, most ancient and bitter enemy of England and the throne, forgot the yesteryears and joined England in mourning and tribute to the King.

The Irish Free State tricolor was flown at half-staff over all public buildings and for the first time the newspaper Irish Press published a large studio portrait of King George.

At Geneva, the League of Nations canceled the morning sessions of the committee of 13 and the Council in respect to the memory of King George.

At 4:10 p. m. the Council convened in a solemn public session of "secular requiem" on behalf of 58 nations, members of the League.

Breaking a 15-year tradition that members of the Council shall remain seated while speaking, a League spokesman rose to his feet to express the Council's sorrow and sympathy with Queen Mary, members of the royal family and the British nation.

Whole Council Rises.

The entire gathering then rose for a few moments and stood in silence. Marcel Leger, of France, said all nations feel Britain's grief. He expressed France's condolences to the royal family and the British people.

"I am deeply distressed by news of the death of His Majesty, King George V. We hasten to offer to Your Majesty our heartfelt sympathy and asurance of our prayers, especially that God may console you, Her Majesty, the queen mother, the royal family and the entire nation in the loss which you have suffered."

Vatican Flags at Half Staff.

All flags at Vatican City and the extra-territorial properties of the Holy See were flown at half-staff. The English colony celebrated mass for the British Empire, since it was unable to observe mass for King George because he was a Protestant.

In England itself all markets were closed and the country's normal routine was practically at a standstill. At 9 a. m. the traditional 70-gun salute was fired at Portsmouth. King George got his early naval training at Portsmouth.

"I am deeply affected by the tragic loss you and the royal family have suffered. I beg you to accept the deepest sympathy of myself and all the members of my house."

Baldwin Eulogizes George V on Radio

New York, Jan. 21 (AP).—Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin of Great Britain, in an address broadcast to the British Empire and the United States, tonight eulogized the late King George V as ruler and man and called upon his subjects to "sustain the young King."

Calling the late monarch a gallant ruler in "a raving world," Baldwin said of his last hours in Sandringham:

"Each time he became conscious it was some kind inquiry or kind observation of someone, some word of gratitude for kindness shown.

"But he did say to his secretary when he sent for him, 'How is the empire?'—an unusual phrase in that form. The secretary said, "All is well, sire, with the empire.' The King gave him a smile and lapsed once more into unconsciousness.

"We can best honor the noble memory of King George by gathering around and sustaining the young King."

Edward Flies to Take Throne

ence of God, profess, testify and declare that I am a faithful member of the Protestant Reformed Church by law established in England, and that I shall, according to the true intent of enactments which secure the Protestant succession to the throne of the realm, uphold and maintain said enactments to the best of my powers, according to law."

Although Edward automatically became King upon his father's death, the formal coronation ceremony will not be held for more than a year. Then the official period of mourning will be over.

Queen Mary, now the Queen Mother, was said to be bearing up "magnificently." She broke down last night when her husband died.

George's body was removed to the church after the new King, accompanied by his brother, the Duke of York, now heir-presumptive, had left by airplane for London. They were piloted by Edward's private pilot.

The King's piper played a wailing lament as the procession moved along the church walk. Queen Mary and other members of the royal family walked behind the cortege.

Six workmen of the estate, dressed in corduroy breeches and leather jackets, carried the coffin from the death chamber to the bier and then mounted guard tonight over the body.

A short service was conducted by the parish rector and then the family returned to Sandringham House.

When King Edward reached London he drove by automobile through streets lined with thousands of his subjects. They doffed their hats and curtsied, but no cheers went up.

Edward went to Buckingham Palace to see his brother, the Duke of Gloucester, who is ill with a cold and was the only child of King George not in the death chamber last night at the end.

Then he went to York House, which was his official residence as the Prince of Wales, to attend a meeting of officials to discuss arrangements for ceremonies of the next few days.

Two little princesses, Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, the only granddaughters of the late King, were told the sad news today by their mother, the Duchess of York. They are at the royal lodge at Windsor, where the Duchess is convalescing from an illness.

Gun salutes to the memory of George were fired by His Majesty's ships throughout the world. Thousands of mourners attended a special memorial service at noon in St. Paul's Cathedral here.

London's financial district was shut up and theaters were dark as a mark of respect for George.

Many workers wore black ties or arm bands as a sign of their grief and flags throughout the city were at half staff.

King George is expected to be buried in a vault at Windsor with his father, King Edward VII. Other English kings also are buried there.

It was understood that King Edward, who is returning to Sandringham tomorrow, probably will fly if the weather permits.

George's Last Day Revealed.

It was officially stated that King George, who was ill only for four days, sat up in an arm chair for a time on each day of his illness.

He was propped up in an armchair when he held the last privy council yesterday, signing the order in council on a portable table placed across his knees.

Yesterday morning the King sent for one of the high officials of his household and spent some time in talking over matters of state.

The propping up in the armchair was done under his physicians' instructions as he was able to breath more easily in a sitting position.

Tonight's court circular from Sandringham chronicling the death of King George said: "During the last moments of his majesty the Archbishop of Canterbury read special prayers and conducted a short service in the King's room."

Maryland Youth Still Feels Friendly Tap of New King

The new King of England, Edward VIII, once saluted a Washington youngster who had climbed to the wall of an estate to see the then Prince of Wales.

Burke Edwards, now on Chevy Chase, Md., who operates a short wave radio station, was listening to the announcement of the death of George V when he recalled the incident.

During the visit of the then Prince of Wales to Washington in 1919, Edawrds who then 8 years old, climbed to a wall which surrounded the estate of the late Admiral George Dewey.

"I waited with hundreds of others to see the Prince," Edawrds said. "At last he came out and as he loked around I stood next to him. I was just shoulder high to the Prince because I was standing on the brick wall. I saluted and said 'howdy, Prince.'"

"The Prince, who was waiting a signal to come out to his car, grinned as he returned my salute with his hand going to his cap in the motion that has helped make him so popular.

"Then he reached over and slapped me on the shoulder as he said, 'How are you, youngster?' Then he went out to his waiting car and was gone. Anyway, I can say that I have had a chat with the King of England."

Edwards is a graduate of American University.

6 Nations Name Hudson.

Geneva, Jan. 21 (AP).—Six nations—Great Britain, France, Italy, Ireland, Austria and Belgium—today included Dr. Manley O. Hudson, of Harvard University, in their nominations to fill World Court vacancies. France and Belgium also nominated Henry L. Stimson, former United States Secretary of State.

met by the rector, the Rev. A. R. Fuller, and the body was taken inside.

There were no flowers in the church.

Queen Mary and her children, save for the new King Edward and the Dukes of York and Gloucester—all in London—stayed for a half-hour service, then returned to Sandringham House.

Funeral Tuesday.

Tomorrow George's tenants and the members of his household will be permitted to file past the plain oaken coffin. But they will not see his face, for the bier is covered.

At the stroke of noon on Thursday, the body will be moved on a gun carriage of the Royal Horse Artillery to Wolferton Station, 2½ miles away, for the trip to London.

There it will lie in state at Westminster Hall until Tuesday, when it will be taken with a full state procession to Paddington Station for the journey to St. George's Chapel at Windsor, last funeral rites and burial.

King Edward VIII and other members of the royal family will follow the bier on foot from Sandringham to the little station Thursday, weather permitting.

The late King's company of the Fifth Territorial Battalion, Royal Norfolk Regiment, will guard the special train to London; a group of grenadier guards will act as pallbearers. Beyond this, there will be no military display.

FERA Director to Speak.

Henry C. Alsberg, director of literary projects of the FERA, tonight will address the Institute of the Jewish Community Center. He will discuss the subject of "Luft Menschen in the Machine Age."

House Adjourns as Tribute

the Canadian Legation; Minister Michael MacWhite, of the Irish Free State, and Minister Ralph Close, of the Union of South Africa.

Richard Southgate, chief of the protocol division of the State Department, accompanied Secretary Hull. They were followed in the course of the day by the Assistant Secretaries of State, who left their cards.

Secretary of War, George H. Dern, accompanied by Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff, called at the British Embassy to express the sympathy of the War Department.

Secretary of the Navy Claude Swanson sent a cablegram to Admiral William H. Stanley, chief of naval operations, now attending the London naval conference, directing him to express to the first lord of the admirality, the Navy's regret over the death of Britain's "sailor king."

President Roosevelt has not yet named a "special ambassador" to the funeral of King George. The expectation is, however, that he will designate Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American delegation to the naval conference.

Throughout the day foreign diplomats and their wives called at the British Embassy to express their condolences.

Cathedral Service.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, who was among those calling at the British Embassy, announced that services would be held for King George in the Washington Cathedral at a date to be announced later. Ambassador Lindsay, he said, had promised to attend. The services probably will be coincident with those in London.

The resolution of adjournment adopted by the House, which was offered by Chairman McReynolds, of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, follows:

"Resolved, That the House of Represetnatives of the United States of America has learned with profound sorrow of the death of His Majesty, Georve V, and sympathizes with his people in the loss of their beloved sovereign.

"Resilved, That the President of the United States be requested to communicate this expression of sentiment of the House of Representatives to the government of Great Brtiain.

"Resolved, That as a further mark of respect to the memory of King George the House do now adjourn."

The prayer of the Rev. Dr. James Shera Montgomery, House chaplain, follows:

"Almighty God, Thou who holdest in Thy heart the secret of life and the mystery of death, hearken as we pause with a bowed and sorrowing world. A noble sovereign, grandly human and just, has passed through the portals of time. He has left a heritage of wisdom, power and goodness, which reaches to the ends of the earth.

"Lord, God of nations, we praise thee for his rich Christian character, for his fidelity to the right and for the way he mastered the rush of feeling in the darkest moments of his realm. Great soul, he marked the star in the darkness, he heard the music on the waters and the still, small voice in the deluge.

"O, comfort his people, we pray. As we approach our tasks, may we believe in the resurrection and in the life eternal. We wait for the breath of God—in the name of our Saviour. Amen."

A memorial service for the late King will be held at 5 p. m. tomorrow at the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church. Dr. Albert Joseph McCartney, pastor, and Dr. Charles A. Richmond, of Union Theological Seminary, will be in charge. The Covenant quartet will sing.

Edward Shows He'll Be a King To Own Taste

Subjects Wonder If Cares of State Will Banish His Love of Glamour.

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 21.—England saw her new monarch break precedent today and wondered if Edward VIII, modern and strong-willed to the core, will write a fresh chapter in the private lives of kings.

All agreed he had made a good start toward upsetting tradition on the first day of his rule by linking his restless energy and highly modern ideas to the authority of the throne.

By tonight, in the few hours he had been sovereign of Great Britain and Ireland, India and the dominions beyond the seas, the 41-year-old Edward had demonstrated he intends to be king in his own fashion.

Sets Clocks Back.

One of his first acts was to have the clocks of Sandringham House set back. They had been a half hour fast down through all the years since Edward VII, piqued at missing an appointment, decided that was the way to keep from being late again.

Then the new ruler stepped into an airplane and soared to ancient London, to become the first British King to travel through the skies.

These acts started a flood of conjecture as to whether Edward VIII intends to permit his new position to restrict the glamorous and free private life he always has led.

London and the empire wondered: Will he continue to indulge his fondness for dancing, fox hunting, gay parties and trips to continental pleasure spots? Or will he surrender the informality which has marked his personal pleasures?

Opinion Divided.

Some thought the new King would contrive to safeguard the dignity of the throne, yet continuing to do what he likes to do.

Others thought the gay, fun-loving Prince of Wales was, by necessity, gone forever. His interest in sports and night life, they pointed out, has diminished considerably in the last few years.

Nevertheless, the fact he is a bachelor with no direct home ties, still interested in the modern world, put the question of Edward's private life clearly in the foreground.

His ascension to the throne ended the last remote possibility that he might marry a commoner—for years his "fan" mail has come in steady flood from all parts of the world—and only five royal princesses appeared eligible to sit with him on the throne.

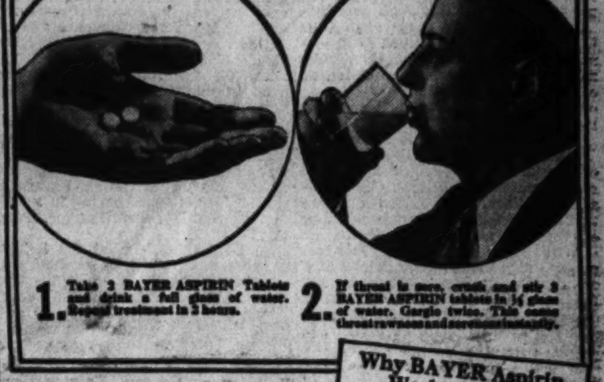
Baltimorean a Favorite.

These are Irene, Catherine and Eugenie, of Greece, the first two sisters and Eugenie, their cousin; Juliana, of the Netherlands, and Kyre, of Russia, daughter of the Grand Duke Cyril.

The erstwhile Wales, however, has shown a decided preference for women remote from royalty, although of high social position.

His most recent "Friend No. 1" has been the chic, dark-eyed Mrs. Ernest Simpson, the former Wallis Warfield, of Baltimore.

COLD?
Do These 2 Things
Instantly!
A Simple Method that Anybody Can Follow



1. Take 2 BAYER ASPIRIN Tablets and drink a full glass of water. Repeat treatment in 2 hours.
2. If throat is sore, crush and stir 3 BAYER ASPIRIN tablets in ⅓ glass of water. Gargle twice. This eases throat rawness and soreness instantly.

THE pictured directions above show perhaps the quickest, simplest and most modern method yet discovered to combat cold and sore throat.

Your own doctor will approve this way. Millions of people have discarded "cold killers" and patent nostrums for this modern way. It relieves the average cold almost as fast as you caught it.

Note that all you do is this.

Two Bayer Aspirin tablets with a full glass of water

Three Bayer Aspirin tablets, crushed and dissolved in ⅓ glass of water as a gargle. Gargle with this mixture twice, holding your head well back to permit this medicated gargle to reach the irritated membranes of the throat.

The Bayer Aspirin you take internally acts to fight a cold almost instantly. AND — eases the aches and pains that accompany most colds.

The gargle acts instantly like a local anesthetic to soothe pains in the throat and to ease irritation.

Why BAYER Aspirin Works So Fast

Drop a Bayer Aspirin tablet into a glass of water. By the time it hits the bottom of the glass it is disintegrating.

IN 2 SECONDS BY STOP WATCH
A Genuine Bayer Aspirin tablet starts to disintegrate and go to work.
What happens in these glasses happens in your stomach — Genuine BAYER Aspirin tablets start "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

Try this way. You will be amazed at how quickly you can ease a cold. Be sure, though, to get Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN. They dissolve almost instantly in the stomach. Hence start working almost instantly. And also, dissolve thoroughly enough for use as a gargle.

Society Mourns George V; Recalls Edward's Visit Here

By Dudley Harmon.

On a cold, rainy day in November, 1919, a slender young man buttoned up in a heavy greatcoat, stepped off a train in Union Station, shook hands with Vice President Marshall, blushed slightly, and said bashfully, "I'm glad to be here."

Yesterday that visitor of 16 years ago took the oath of office in London as King Edward VIII. And in Washington, as in many world capitals, flags on embassies flew at half mast for the death of King George V of Great Britain.

Reminiscences of members of Capital society who met the Prince on his visit in 1919, and stories in yellowed files attest to the fact that his visit was a strenuous one. In the three days that he was here, the Prince of Wales shook hands with thousands of people, decorated war veterans, exchanged humorous anecdotes with President Wilson, visited Mount Vernon and Annapolis and danced and dined with debutantes and dowagers.

Stopped with Belmonts.

President Wilson was ill at the time of his visit, so the Prince was met at the station by Vice President Marshall and a group of officials. From the station he went directly to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont, on New Hampshire avenue and Eighteenth street. Today this splendid mansion houses the headquarters of the Order of Eastern Star, and the room where the Prince slept has been turned into an office.

That same night Vice President Marshall entertained at dinner for the Prince at the Belmont home. After dinner the Prince addressed the Press Club and then attended a huge reception for 5,000 people at the Library of Congress. He shook hands with the guests with his left hand. His right one was disabled by too much handshaking in Canada, whence he had just come.

After the reception, the Prince fainted, worn out with the ordeal. The next day, however, found him on his way to Mount Vernon, where he inscribed his name on the register just like any other visitor. In the morning he greeted 2,000 American soldiers, wounded on the battlefields of France, when he called at Walter Reed Hospital.

Wilson Call Informal.

The Prince's call on President Wilson was an informal one, owing to the latter's illness. After tea with the President's daughter, Miss Margaret Wilson, the Prince climbed the stairs to the sick room and had a long talk with the President.

Washington debutantes had an opportunity to meet the Prince at a tea given by Mrs. Joseph Leiter, and found him charming. Many members of Capital society remember the dance at Grasslands in his honor, at which his hostesses were Louisa and Frances Hoar, daughters of Speaker Gillett.

At her press conference yesterday, Mrs. Roosevelt reminisced about the evening when she sat next to the new King at a dinner given for him here by the late Secretary of State and Mrs. Robert Lansing.

"Howdy, Prince."

When King Edward looks back upon this Washington visit, perhaps he remembers best not the state dinners and dances given in his honor, but incidents such as the one where a young boy, anxious to see the Prince, climbed the wall of the residence of Admiral Dewey, where the Prince was a guest, and said "Howdy, Prince."

Or perhaps he recalls the young girls he saw standing in a downtown office building, to whom he bowed courteously, and whom he overheard whisper, "Isn't he nice! And aren't his cheeks pink!"

King Edward visited Washington again in August, 1924, but only for a few hours. After lunch with President Coolidge, who overcame his usual silence and chatted easily in an effort to entertain the Prince, the latter left for New York.

Congressional Reception Postponed Because of Monarch's Death.

The death of King George V of Great Britain has plunged Capital society into mourning more deeply than the death of any other foreign monarch. Not only have foreign missions, related to the British royalty, gone into mourning, but out of respect of the late King, the House of Representatives adjourned yesterday.

The Congressional reception scheduled to be held tomorrow night at the White House has been postponed out of respect for the memory of his late Majesty until Monday evening, February 10. Mrs. Roosevelt canceled the luncheon which she had planned at the Executive Mansion yesterday when Lady Lindsay, wife of the British Ambassador, was to have been the ranking guest.

The United States is observing no real period of official mourning. Immediate functions have been canceled or postponed by the Chief Executive and First Lady as a personal expression of regret on the death of the King. Mrs. Roosevelt said at her press conference yesterday that her husband knew King George well, although she had never met him herself.

All official and unofficial social activity has been canceled by members of the staffs of the British Embassy, the Canadian, Irish Free State, and South African Legations, all of which will observe a nine-month period of mourning. Virtually all ambassadors and ministers from European courts are effected by the strict edict of mourning which has been declared, inasmuch as the royal families of those countries are related by blood or marriage to the British royal family.

The Minister of Norway and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, whose Queen is the only living daughter of Edward VII, and a sister of the late King George, have canceled invitations for the reception they were giving on Friday afternoon, and will observe a longer period of mourning than most missions other than the British, Canadian, Irish Free State and South African. The Ambassador of Brazil and Mme. Aranha canceled the dinner planned for last evening and the one for tonight, out of respect for the late King, and because so many of their invited guests would have been unable to attend.

The Belgian Embassy, which has been in mouring for the past two years with the exception of short periods, will again observe a period. They had just emerged from mourning for the late Queen Astrid, which was preceded by mourning for Albert, King of the Belgians, and a shorter, less formal period in memory of the late Ambassador, Paul May.

So Capital society, at the height of the season, will lose much of the glamour contributed to it by the members of the Diplomatic Corps. Those in mourning will do no entertaining, and those not in mourning will entertain informally and at smaller parties because the number who come under the edict are such a large group of the Diplomatic Corps.

WAS IT MURDER?

By JAMES HILTON

Author of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" and "Lost Horizon."

Colin Revell, young writer, is called by Robert Roseveare, headmaster of Oakington School, to look into the mysterious death of Robert Marshall, younger brother of Wilbraham, head-prefect, and cousin of Mr. Ellington, his housemaster. Robert's skull had been pierced by a gas light fixture that had fallen on him in bed. Roseveare found a note written by the boy the night before, leaving his belongings "if anything should happen" to Wilbraham. Revell talks with Daggat, garrulous school padre; Lambourne, one of the masters, and Ellington and his young wife, but finds no solution. He revisits the school when Wilbraham is found dead, apparently having dived into the empty swimming pool in the dark. Suspicion points to Ellington, who inherits 100,000 pounds from the boy.

CHAPTER IX.

THE GROUNDS of Oakington School were roughly circular, and round them ran a pleasant tree-sheltered pathway popularly known as the Ring. Four successive generations of Oakingtonians had found that to make its complete circuit, at strolling pace, was an agreeable way of spending a quarter of an hour when there was nothing else to do, and upon this Wednesday afternoon in June Revell followed almost instinctively the familiar trail.

He lit a cigarette as he began the second circuit of the Ring. The easiest thing, undoubtedly, was to believe that things were just as they seemed. Two fatal accidents to two brothers—well, it was unusual, even remarkable, but was it more so than any conceivable alternative supposition?

Anyhow, as Lambourne had said, he had better tackle the more recent affair, since not only was there a greater chance of discovering things from it, but also his inquiries could be made more openly, as springing from the mere natural curiosity of an Old Oakingtonian about an affair that was for the time being on everybody's lips. And so, he made his way to the low, squat, red-bricked erection, some distance away from the rest, in which, ten years before, he had splashed about on many a summer's afternoon.

His lips tightened irritably as he turned the handle of the door and found it unlocked. The place ought not, he felt, to have been thus left open to any casual sensation-seeker. He walked through the small entrance hall, and into the main glass-roofed building. Four elderly charwomen were kneeling on the floor of the bath busily engaged in scrubbing the white porcelain tiles. At the farther end, by the diving platforms, a rough-looking fellow was noisily dismantling an improvised grandstand consisting of several tiers of wooden benches. Revell watched the scene for over a minute before anyone saw him. At length he walked along the edge of the bath and approached the man at the far end. "Busy cleaning-up, I see?" he commented, with the air of a fatuous sight-seer.

The man nodded deferentially, noticing the Old Oakingtonian tie. "Yes, sir, I reckon I don't want to see a thing like that again. Fell right off from the top, and you'd think so, too, if you'd seen what I saw. Terrible thing, ain't it? An' happenin' just now—right in front of speech day. Of course there ain't goin' to be no swimmin' gala—natchrally that's been put off."

Revell inclined his head in melancholy agreement. "I suppose the poor chap must have taken a plunge in the dark?" he hazarded.

"Looks like it," replied the other. "The fuses was all gorn."

All Clews Obliterated.

Revell, with a farewell nod to the man, walked back toward the entrance. The same trick as before, he reflected ruefully—all traces obliterated and in quite the most natural manner, too. He flung down the stump of his cigarette and ground it under his heel. Really, if there were anything in Lambourne's theory, it had all been managed with devilish ingenuity.

As he descended the outside steps of the swimming-bath a small female figure on a bicycle suddenly dismounted in front of him and greeted him with a bright smile. "Hullo, Mr. Revell—how are you? I didn't know you were up here."

The encounter relieved him momentarily of his load of doubts and apprehensions. "Hullo, Mrs. Ellington—delighted to meet you again. Yes, I thought I'd come up for speech day. Not going to be such a joyous festival, though, is it?"

"It's just frightful," she answered, her dark eyes clouding over instantly. "I feel particularly awful about it myself, because it was I who suggested having the bath cleaned. It wasn't very dirty, but I happened to be looking in on Monday afternoon in connection with the seating arrangements for the gala display and it just occurred to me then that the bath might be a little bit cleaner. So I mentioned it to my husband and he mentioned it to the Head, and the order was given to Wilson almost immediately. And but for that . . ." She shuddered and stared miserably at the handlebars of her bicycle.

"But really, Mrs. Ellington, I don't think you can possibly feel responsible. The whole affair was just a most frightful accident——" He had said it before he realized what he was saying.

"Oh yes, I know, but that doesn't stop me from feeling as I do about it . . . Will you come along to tea, by the way?"

"We Shall Be Rich!"

Ellington was not in when they reached the house, so they prepared the tea themselves, chatting pleasantly meanwhile. "You know," she said, "we come into an awful lot of money through that poor boy being killed. Tom's his nearest relative, you see—there was simply nobody else to leave it to. We shall be quite rich."

Revell assumed polite surprise. "Will you leave Oakington, do you think?"

"Oh, I do hope so. The life of a schoolmaster's wife isn't all fun."

Ellington himself came in at that moment in an obvious bad temper. He shook hands perfunctorily with Revell, planked himself down in the most comfortable chair and told his wife, when she handed him a cup of tea, that it was disgustingly weak. A boor as well as a bore, Revell reflected. A few mouthfuls of buttered teacake made the man more talkative but only to air his grumbles. "Speech day tomorrow, by gad!" he muttered. "Boys seem to think that because a fatal accident's happened they can all run riot. I had to thrash several of them today for being late, and the excuse they gave me, if you please, was that they'd been in the swimming-bath talking to Wilson!"

"Don't you think it's rather excusable?" Mrs. Ellington queried.

"No, I do not."

Revell interposed tactfully. "I certainly agree," he said, addressing Ellington, "that there's been far too much sightseeing in the swimming-bath. What possibility is there of reconstructing how the accident happened when everybody's been allowed to treat the place like a side show on a fair ground?"

Ellington faced him truculently. "Reconstructing, eh? What d'you mean? Isn't Murchiston's opinion good enough? And the Head's, too? Still, you're right about the sightseeing—there has been too much of it. And there's been too much of other things, too. Chattering and gossiping and idle tittle-tattle—the whole school's full of it. I can't even cycle into the village without a dozen people stopping me to ask questions. Stupid scandalmongering, that's all it is."

There was nothing much to be got out of him save repeated grumbles on similar lines, so Revell took an early leave.

Dr. Roseveare was most charming at dinner. Not till the close of the meal did the conversation approach the narrowed confines of Oakington, and then Revell, seizing the opportunity, asked if he might visit the swimming-bath on his own.

Roseveare Is Interested.

Roseveare seemed more interested in the request than surprised by it. "Why, yes, of course, if you wish. I will lend you my key. I am afraid, though, that you will find very little of interest."

"Still, I'd like a look around. And there's just one other thing, too. Could I be permitted to see the—er—the body?"

Roseveare smiled rather sadly. "You think it necessary for your—investigations, eh? Well, I'll take you now—it is almost dark and we shall attract less attention than in the daytime.

At about half-past ten, therefore, on the eve of Oakington Jubilee Speech Day, Revell looked upon what was left of Wilbraham Marshall, sometime head-prefect of Oakington School. The doctor did not look at all.

"And now," said Revell, as they left the gymnasium and relocked it, "I needn't trouble you any further if you will just lend me the swimming bath key."

Roseveare detached it from his bundle and pressed it into Revell's hand with an almost fatherly gesture. "Yes, I think I'll leave you to it—I have a number of urgent matters to attend to. Good night."

Revell unlocked the door of the swimming bath and walked up the entire length of the building as far as the diving board and platforms. Then he walked back again. That was all. He had seen what he wanted to see and was rather proud, indeed, of having expected to see it. And also, too, he had heard what he wanted to hear."

Make-Up Shades.

WHAT shades of make-up should you wear with the soft grays that will be so popular the next few months? Do your lipstick, rogue and nail polish harmonize perfectly with your newest frock? What color eye shadow will be most flattering with that charming evening gown you bought the other day?

The answer to these and many other perplexing make-up problems is answered by the clever new make-up chart presented to you this season by a well-known beauty expert. One glance at the chart and you know instantly and exactly the shades of rouge—lipstick—nail polish—powders—and even foundation to wear with each of the smart new spring colors.

All About Feet.

WHEN your feet begin to grumble that they're sadly abused and revenge themselves (as feet are wont to do) by smarting and aching, you can soothe them quickly with a delightful "foot ice." This was prepared especially for contrary feet. It's a sort of gelatinous preparation that comes in a tube. A little bit of it rubbed over those tired feet simply does things in no time.

Women whose work keeps them on their feet long hours at a time will find "foot ice" a faithful friend.

They Work for World Peace

Once the actual causes of war are revealed, cures will naturally follow, thinks Miss Josephine Schain (left), of the National Committee on the Cause and Cure of War. Miss Kathleen Courtney (right), of the British Womens Peace Crusade, believes "organized, informed public opinion will eventually bring about world peace."

Kathleen Courtney Addresses Women's National Press Club

Power of Public Opinion Against War Revealed in World Action Toward Italy, Declares Honorary Secretary of British Organization.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

REVEALING HIGHLIGHTS in Great Britain's current peace movement, Miss Kathleen Courtney at a luncheon of the Women's National Press Club yesterday pointed out that the recent defeat of the Hoare-Laval proposal was definite proof of "English collective resistance to a war of aggression" and "striking evidence of the power of public opinion in a democratically governed country."

The honorary secretary of the British Women's Peace Crusade, Miss Courtney, who clips her words and broadens her "a's" in characteristic British fashion, further explained that the Abyssinian situation, apart from being a set-back to the peace movement, had thrown into relief the latter's tremendous influence on public opinion.

"What has happened in England and France since the Italo-Abyssinian War began to cast its shadow on the international scene has taught us that organized, informed public opinion is the most important factor in bringing world peace," she said.

Declaring that "the burst of indignation against aggression in Abysinnia came from the public rather than from the government of Great Britain," she said the policy now being followed is the direct result of the National Peace ballot, which proved 11,000,000 voters endorsed a thorough-going League of Nations policy. "This, the basis of Britain's present policy regarding Abyssinia, conclusively proves public opinion is the strongest factor in winning world peace."

Miss Schain Is Guest.

Another honor guest at the luncheon was Miss Josephine Schain, chairman of the executive committee of the National Committee on the Cause and Cure of War.

In an interview early yesterday morning, Miss Schain pointed out that despite the war clouds gathering in Europe, the bursting of bombs in Ethiopia, and the march of Japan into Asia, "there has been much progress toward the goal of world peace since the Conference on the Cause and Cure of War assembled in Washington last year.

"While in the past ten months militaristic gestures have culminated in war, at no time in history have there also been such powerful demonstrations of opposition to war as have been evident recently.

"What is probably more significant than the war itself is the fact the League of Nations very nearly persuaded Italy to abandon its imperialistic gestures," she continued. "This, as nothing else, reveals the rise of public opinion against war."

Nye Committee.

Complimenting the Nye munitions committee on the influence it is having "in revealing the real causes of war—which, when revealed, will result in a world-wide cure," Miss Schain said she was convinced" the Nye committee should have the appropriation to finish its investigation job."

In this connection she mentioned, however, that "the attack on Wilson was unfortunate. I don't think the flare-up it occasioned should distract people from the fundamental issue at stake—the discovery of actual causes of war."

Discussing activity of the National Committee on the Cause and Cure of War the past year, Miss Schain mentioned, "There have been ten regional conferences in the United States and more than 700 forums conducted on peace issues, as well as concerted action to win converts to the cause through the press."

Miss Schain feels the cause and cure of war should concern women no more than men. "This is a job that cuts across sex, race and national boundaries," she said.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

HER CLOTHES always have a dashing exotic charm and she's the type that can wear barbaric looking costume jewelry with a flare. Naturally she expresses her individuality in her home, too, especially in her choice of Chinese details in accessories. Her living room furniture is mostly Queen Anne and she has a wine-red damask sofa and two chairs that need reupholstering. What color and material should she use? Must she use damask for the chairs because the sofa is in damask? The walls are buff. She has two Chinese lamps with white shades and another Chinese lamp in darker colors on a black ground—also a white leather-covered chair, a Persian rug in taupe, black, blue and ginger. What draperies would be best, she would like to know, and asks us to help her plan something interesting and to suggest an arrangement for the furniture . . . We'd have the two upholstered chairs done in Peking blue . . . velvet would be a good material or damask could be used though that isn't necessary just because she has it for the sofa. For the draperies we should like beige the color of the walls hung over sheer curtains of the same tone. The draperies could be lined with red. Accents of Chinese pewter might be rather nice details.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Reader Believes Domestic Employe Has Distorted Ideal of Democracy.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: This is in reference to your columns of December 24 and January 7, which entertained a discussion of the problem of the so-called ill-used domestic worker in this country.

I could write an essay on "The Domestic-Help Problem." However, I'll confine my brief to just two sore points which exist to bedevil the relationship of mistress and maid in the United States, the first of which is lack of decent living quarters for domestics in homes and apartments. Our grandest apartment houses, implying by their luxurious fronts that the occupants have servants, nevertheless have no quarters for servants on the premises. Even quite modest apartment houses abroad make provisions for housing servants.

It is inhuman to confine a domestic employe to the limits of a modern kitchen or basement or public park, on the one hand; or, on the other hand, to expect such help to spend hours each day traveling between the rich and poor sections of a city.

• • • •

My second point offers no such hope of solution, for it implies a change in mental attitude on the part of the employe. It involves one of our most cherished national ideals—the ideal of human equality. This ideal has been so distorted in its interpretation that it has virtually destroyed some very necessary qualities of character: namely, humility, courtesy and a philosophical acceptance of one's station in life.

• • • •

The average high school student of today, after 12 years' education at public expense, would be shocked and offended if expected to occupy the same position in society as his parents hold. For example, the son of one tradesman I know wants to be a lawyer; the son of another aspires to become a doctor. Laudable ambitions, these, if within the realm of reality, which does not happen to be the case in the instances cited. The result—a pair of frustrated, sad-eyed social misfits.

• • • •

Most of our public school girl graduates aspire at the least to become stenographers and secretaries. None could support the shame of admitting an ambition to be a first-class cook or nursemaid. Yet it should be obvious that more persons eat than dictate letters and run offices.

• • • •

I contend the public schools, by inculcating in students respect for any work well performed (not only the white-collar jobs) could materially reduce unemployment by providing a steady stream of much needed domestic workers—workers prepared to take pride in their work, uninhibited by any false sense of inferiority. It could be done. But so long as the beautiful ideal of equality is perverted into the slogan: "I'm as good as he is—" so long shall we have sullen, discontended nursemaids and unjust, overbearing mistresses; each on the defensive and being offensive about it . . . Incidentally, would it be useless to extend a lunch invitation to you by telephone? Sincerely. M. S.

Hits Nail on Head.

DEAR M. S.: You have hit several nails on the head in very effective fashion in your foregoing brief on "The Domestic Help Problem." the housing situation generally is lamentable in this country, to say the least, and nowhere more so than in the Nation's Capital. With the apartment house dweller hard put to it to find tolerable lodgings for himself and family; with rents prohibitive; with space, ventilation and daytime lighting often inadequate; with children banned where dogs are permitted, it's small wonder his domestic employes are left to shift for themselves when it comes to the question of living quarters.

The distortion of a lofty ideal of democracy into the bitter, fighting slogan "I'm as good as he is—" is no doubt largely responsible for this country's failure to produce a great class of expertly trained, self-respecting domestic workers. But I wonder who is the more to blame—the reluctant domestic worker who despises his lot, or the so-called lord and lady of the manor whose mistaken condescension has led him to believe his lot is despicable and he despised?

• • • •

I suppose our public schools generally will be found teaching those philosophies which the ruling classes hold should be taught; and it may be our modern method of so-called "progressive education" for work done with hands as well as with mind.

Call me one day and we'll give impromptu consideration to the matter of lunching. M. H.

Actress Says Time Needed To Play Role

Amateur Theatricals Waste of Energy Is Belief of Mrs. Karsten.

IF YOU ENJOY acting, it makes little difference whether you perform with a professional or an amateur group, thinks Elinor Cox Karsten, who has had much experience on the professional stage and who will have a leading role in Noel Coward's "The Young Idea," to be presented by the Capital Players tonight. She believes, however, that "an amateur production is a great waste of time and energy. In only one or two performances an actress doesn't really have time to create a role," she said yesterday. "On the professional stage, you have an opportunity to develop with your part; you continue to grow with it for about six months. After that you must watch yourself to keep from 'going stale.'"

MRS. KARSTEN.

Her Favorite Role.

Mrs. Karsten feels her best professional role was that of Mrs. Hale in Susan Glaspell's "Trifles." At the time she played that, she was connected with the Washington Square Players, which later became the Theater Guild of New York.

As Mrs. Hale she gave 150 performances. "I'm sure I was much better the fiftieth time than the first," she said. "It takes one almost that long to grow into any role."

It was the Mrs. Hale part that attracted the attention of Margaret Anglin, who said no actress in New York that year was doing "more interesting work than Elinor Cox in 'Trifles.'"

Broun Praised Her.

At the end of her next season in New York, Heywood Broun listed Elinor Cox's work with that of Fay Bainter, Florence Reed and Lynn Fontanne.

With a wide background of study and practical experience in dramatic and musical work, Mrs. Karsten has been in productions with such well-known players as Glenn Hunter, Ivan Simpson, Alice Chapin, Grace George, Katharine Cornell and Helen Westley.

Will Play "Jennifer."

A resident of Washington for a year, she has acted and sung with six organizations, including the National Theater Players. She has been in three important roles with the Pierce-Hall Players, played Donna D'Achuna in support of Florence Reed in "Shanghai Gesture" with the National Theater Players and has been associated with the Roadsiders in their summer theater just outside the city.

Her part as Jennifer is one of the leading roles in "The Young Idea," to be given at Pierce Hall tonight under the auspices of the Bekeñ-Delaporte Institute.

Nervous Type Suffers Most From Ulcers

Rest, Neutralizing of Excess Acid and Regulation of Diet Aid Cure.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

ULCERS in the stomach and the duodenum were first described accurately about 100 years ago. Since then the attention of medical science has been directed toward this periodically painful disease.

There are certain peculiarities about peptic ulcer that are difficult to explain. For example, the condition is present in eight times as many men as women and the colored race is practically immune. Furthermore, animals do not develop these ulcers. The suggestion has been offered that the basic cause is some inherent upset of the nervous system—an "out-of-balance" as it were—that characterizes the ulcer patient. The roly-poly physique; the jocular mentality to whom the world is a joke, is rarely a victim. Peptic ulcer appears first of all to be a disease of the entire body, not alone of the mucous lining of the stomach, and it occurs for the most part in those long, lean, lank individuals who represent a highly nervous or worrying type.

The patient will nearly always relate that he has suffered from chronic indigestion for some time, although on close questioning he will admit that there have been periods in which he was symptom free. This cyclic character of the acute symptoms is quite typical. Pain is the most significant sign and, as a rule, will appear with clocklike regularity. If the ulcer is in the stomach many patients can foretell the coming of pain to the minute and there follows a regular sequence: (1) the taking of food, (2) a period of comfort, (3) a period of pain, (4) a period of comfort, (5) the taking of food, etc.

Nausea Proceeds Pain.

Vomiting may occur when the pain is severe. It is often preceded by nausea and sometimes patients will welcome the relief that follows emptying of the stomach. Slight bleeding, although common, rarely leads to vomiting. In some cases, however, the expulsion of an ounce or two of blood may be the first important symptom observed by the patient indicating the presence of an ulcer.

Exact recognition of the situation is not difficult as by means of test meals and X-ray plates not only can the presence of an ulcer be proved but its position located with reasonable accuracy. Great care is necessary not to confuse peptic ulcer symptoms with those which arise as the result of gall bladder disease.

Treatment consists: First rest in bed for a week or two or until all signs of hemorrhage have disappeared; second, neutralizing excess gastric acidity which frequently evists; third, the use of gastric mucin or some type of nonirritating acid absorbent; and, fourth, regulation of the diet.

Diet Important.

Most authorities regard the dietary regime of paramount importance. If a soft diet is prescribed, all the milk the patient wishes between meals is allowed. If gastric mucin is used this must be given in proper dosage at least every two hours. Every effort must be made to relieve the patient of mental worries and business cares. It may be necessary to remind him tha this chief objective—for the time being at least—is to recover.

Many patients will improve more rapidly and hence greatly reduce that his chief objective—for the be persuaded that absolute rest is imperative and that an adequate amount of sleep is a necessary part of the treatment. Peptic ulcers tend to become chronic or to recur. This situation may be avoided by a thorough ulcer regimen at the outset, with an examination once every six months thereafter.

Whenever pain in the region of the stomach follows meals—with or without nausea—it should be investigated promptly.

Spring Dress Styles Are Startling and Unusual But Charming Despite Their Unexpectedness

Beige Frock Pictured Today Outstanding Example of Newest Modes.

By Frances Mangum.

IF SPRING dress styles are to be characterized by anyone word, that word is: "unexpected." We find unusual color combinations, strange, fascinating dressmaker touches, amazing trimmings, odd belts, buttons, buckles and outlandish collars and sleeves—all "unexpected." They startle us a bit at first and charm us later.

Chalice-Like Collar.

Now the collar and the pockets. They're delightfully corded in straight lines. The collar flares out like a lily petal, or can be worn down like a daffodil chalice. A narrow flat bow of the same material gives a finishing touch at the front neckline.

Some dresses cut on straight lines and pulled in around the waist by a belt are awkward and bulgy looking. There's no danger here for this frock is given a definite waistline by means of tiny darts all the way around. The belt goes over these. They do double duty by not only contributing a waistline but allowing extra fullness across the front.

Sleeves Deserve Mention.

The sleeves to this frock are among its best features. They are full, graceful sleeves, three-quarter in length, beginning their flare several inches below the shoulder. This is a decided asset. Keep in mind that sleeves flared deliberately high are prone to make you look broad-shouldered.

Few dresses priced at $16.95 have the quality and style features to recommend them that this one possesses.

Where can you buy this frock? Call Frances Mangum, The Post Fashion Editor, National 4200, Extension 323 and she will tell you.

Mrs. Roosevelt Sees 'War Talk' In News Reel

She Tells Conference Here 'Careless' Films Foster World Distrust.

News reels which constitute "loose talking" were assailed last night by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt before the National Conference on the Cause and Cure of War in the Washington Hotel.

She told of receiving a letter from a person who wanted the Government to "do something" about news reels which tend to cause distrust between nations.

"The Government can do nothing about such things," she said. "The only people who can do anything are the people who see it in the theater. If they protest, the thing will disappear.

"You control the opinion wherever that film or radio program or other thing is seen or heard and you have the power to stop whatever is harmful to good feeling between nations."

Mrs. Roosevelt urged that persons who compose questions to be asked of a large number of people use "great care" in propounding their queries.

She explained one recent questionnaire asked whether people in this country favored cutting off all supplies to belligerent nations.

"That is a good example," she added, "of a question asked and answered without people really knowing what it meant."

Urges 'Being Informed.'

She described public opinion as the "best weapon" to aid in leading this country "along the road to peace," but cautioned that "it must be a public opinion that knows what it is talking about and won't say 'yes' tomorrow to something directly opposite."

Mrs. Roosevelt encouraged her listeners to keep informed of world affairs.

"We must try to make our own Nation stand, as far as we can, for the things we believe in and, as women, we must try to influence our Representatives by our convictions and by our well-thought-out ideas."

Another speaker, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, 77-year-old peace campaigner, told the audience of nearly 1,000 women to continue their struggle for peace.

Miss Kathleen D. Courtney, honorary secretary of the British Women's Peace Crusade, outlined how 11,000,000 persons voted for "a thorough-going League of Nations policy" in the National Peace Ballot conducted in her country.

Felix Morley, editor of The Washington Post, spoke at the morning session. He said the causes of war lie "beyond the House of Morgan and the dynasty of duPont."

Morley criticized the inconsistency of Congress in its grave concern with the adoption of rigid mandatory neutrality legislation at the same time it is passing "the largest military appropriation of any peace time year in the history of our country."

On peace machinery, he said: "Close examiation will convince any unprejudiced person that most of the serious shortcomings of the League of Nations are due to the anomaly that the world so greatly needs that which it is as yet ill prepared to create. But in spite of shortcomings and setbacks it is incontestable that the organization which centers at Geneva has been greatly gaining in stature."

He branded pending neutrality legislation as "positively menacing to all constructive work of the last 16 years in the field of international relations."

"I can think of no other problem, not even the Townsend plan," said Morley, "in which a laudable objective is tangled up with a greater number of fundamental misconceptions than seems to me the case with regard to the pending neutrality legislation."

These misconceptions, he asserted, are the beliefs that participation in war is largely due to the influence of capitalist profiteers; that petitions and emotional gatherings discourage war; that strict international isolation is possible, and "the pathetic trust of the American people in the ability of legislation to solve any problem whatever."

Miss Josephine Schain, chairman of the conference, issued a statement in which she said women must not be satisfied merely to condemn war.

"Do not situations in the world today show the necessity of going further and building international institutions which will take the place of war as a means of settling disputes?" she asked.

The four fundamental causes of war may be classified as economic, strategic, political and psychological, the delegates were informed by Dr. Stephen P. Duggan, director of the Institute of International Education.

The first involves raw materials, access to markets, surplus of population and possession of colonies. The second, he continued, is concerned with national self-defense; the third factor with imperialistic motives, and the fourth brings in problems of race and color.

Representatives of 11 affiliated women's organizations are attending the conference, which will continue through Friday night.

Geneva Committee Seeks 'Just' Peace

By the Associated Press

Geneva, Jan. 21.—The League of Nations Council, today received a report from its committee of thirteen declaring the League's aim to be a "just" peace between Italy and Ethiopia.

The committee invited peace proposals from the belligerents in Africa, but decided it will not take the initiative itself. It formally approved the provisional decision that financial assistance for Ethiopia is impractical and that immediate dispatch of a commission of inquiry to Africa is inopportune.

Tomorrow the Council will take up the difficult problem of the free city of Danzig. In the afternoon, Anthony Eden, the British foreign secretary, is to make an important statement to the sanctions committee of eighteen regarding the status of mutual assistance arrangements in the Mediterranean between Britain, France, Yugoslavia, Turkey and Greece.

Ethiopia Rallies All Able-Bodied For Call to War

2,000,000 Men Reported Available; Cheers Greet Proclamation.

By the United Press.

Addis Ababa, Jan. 21.—Every Ethiopian capable of bearing arms was ordered by government proclamation today to stand in readiness for front-line service against Italy.

The proclamation was read from the royal palace to a throng which gathered outside its walls after being summoned by the beating of great drums.

Italy's alleged violations of international law were reiterated in detail while the mob cheered Emperor Haile Selassie and the army.

It is estimated that Ethiopia has at least 2,000,000 potential soldiers available. Undoubtedly all will not be called to the colors, as Ethiopia could not furnish arms and provisions for many more thousands than the 750,000 now in the field.

Some of the troops now on the front may be relieved by fresh men, but casualties are not believed to be so large that reinforcements are needed urgently.

The proclamation said Italy's allegedly unjust attack, transgressions of her international pledges, aerial bombardments and gas attacks "are provoking our people to great revulsion."

"Although the enemies seek to frighten our armies by these diverse means," it said, "they have preserved their morale and unity.

"Now every arms-bearing Ethiopian shall be in readiness for the moment we designate the chief to which he shall betake himself. We will furnish the necessary arms and provisions."

Rome, Jan. 21 (U.P.).—War communique No. 102, issued today, said:

"Marshal Pietro Badoglio telegraphs that the troops of Gen. Rodolfo Graziani on the southern front are continuing to pursue and mop up the disbanded soldiers of Ras Desta Demtu's army.

"On the Eritrean front, a sub-chief of Ras Siyoum, with his armed followers, has surrendered to our military authorities.

Officials Firm In Courthouse Finance Plan

Commissioners to Push Proposal That D. C. Pay Whole Bill.

Action Taken in Face of Adverse Report From President.

Despite an adverse White House report on the bill to provide for construction of a District minor courts building, the District Commissioners yesterday set about seeking means to provide for the building out of District funds. It had been proposed the District should borrow $3,500,000 for the purpose, to be repaid to the Federal Treasury.

Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, was instructed yesterday to prepare a plan which would permit construction of the building out of District revenues. Commissioners expect to consider it at their next meeting on Friday.

Action of the Commissioners was their response to increasing efforts of the Federal Budget Bureau to control municipal affairs. Although Daniel W. Bell, acting chief of the bureau, slashed District estimates for the next fiscal year to the point where another surplus will pile up useless in the Treasury, Mr. Bell turned thumbs down not only on the courts bill, but approved measures to increase District taxes.

Taxes Sought for Years.

The tax increase bills were those proposed by Representative Mapes (Republican), of Michigan, which have been denied action by Congress for the last several years. Bell permitted the Commissioners to make adverse reports on the bills if they wished. But, he added, they were not in conflict with President Roosevelt's policies. The Commissioners intend to make adverse reports on the bills.

Attitude of the city heads was set forth in a letter to Representative Henry Ellenbogen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, in which they listed several bills. Their letter was in response to an inquiry from Ellenbogen. The bills listed provide an inheritance tax, an estate tax, increase in the motor vehicles tax, an income tax, automobile weight tax, and revision of public utilities taxes.

Will Oppose Measures.

"Inasmuch," the Commissioners said, "as the budget for the District of Columbia presented to the Congress for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937, would create a surplus of funds to the credit of the District upon revenues collected under existing law, the Commissioners propose to report adversely upon all these bills in the present session of Congress. They recommend that the bills be not favorably reported."

Creation of a rent commission, the Commissioners were told by Bell, was not in conformity with the President's financial program. Bell gave his approval to a bill introduced by Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, which would permit shifting of precinct detectives and detective sergeants about to follow through on a particulaur case to which they were assigned.

"District Day" May Be Lost.

Because Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House District Committee, cleared the House calendar of all local legislation except the controversial rent bill a week ago and has no new bills ready to report, the committee probably will pass up the second District day of the session next Monday.

Among the new bills to be turned over to sub-committees are the Norton racing bill, the Sisson measure to amend the anti-communism rider and the Schulte bill to impose a graduated scale on chain stores. All were introduced in the House Monday.

The bills passed last week by the Senate to set up a boiler inspection division in the District engineer department and to authorize District authorities to revoke or suspend driving privileges accorded nonresidents convicted of violating local traffic regulations also will be referred.

Fall From Window Fatal To Aged Woman Here

Mrs. Elizabeth Baker, 76, died in Emergency Hospital yesterday from injuries received January 14 when she fell from a second-story window of her home, 812 Twenty-first street northwest.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald ordered the body to the morgue for an autopsy, and said he would investigate the death. Occupants of the house said they did not know how Mrs. Baker fell. She is survived by a niece, Mrs. Amy Morehouse, same address.

Scenes as Opera Is Delayed by Musicians

Members of the cast of "Lakme" trouped through the lobby of Constitutional Hall last night when they waited more than two hours to present the opera. Musicians refused to play when they were offered a check instead of cash.

Post Staff Photos.

turn backstage and try again to prevail upon the players.

Then came another long wait. While the audience began to drift out, scenes of intense drama were enacted behind the stage. Mrs. Albion collapsed in a chair. The musicians, grim-faced and stern, stood around in silence. A few of them sat on the floor, playing their instruments and laughing.

Check Against Rules.

"We can't take the check—it is against union rules," they repeated to all questions.

During the backstage hysteria, Giuseppe Danize, barytone of the Metropolitan Opera Company, paced the floor, running his hand through thick, bushy hair. It was his check, drawn on a New York bank, which had been refused.

The check bore such indorsements as George Oakley Totten, jr., Samuel Schrum, noted musician, and Earl Warren, of Washington.

Time after time, Mrs. Albion rushed onto the stage, pleading with the audience to remain. On one occasion, a man stood up in the gallery. He started to talk.

"I am a member of the musicians' union——" he began.

Sedate, bewhiskered gentlemen, elderly, gray-haired women—all formally clothed for the opera—stod up beside their seats and booed. For nearly a minute they continued to boo, hiss and shout at the man in the gallery.

In the middle of this, Mrs. Cabot Stevens, Washington society matron, strode up and down the aisle. She spoke loudly:

"This is outrageous. Nothing like this has ever happened before. What will the Nation's music lovers say to this? Down with the union—down with the union, I say!"

Hayden Reached.

As the musicians packed up their instruments and donned hats and coats preparing to leave, Mrs. Gertrude Lyons, president of the District Federation of Music Clubs, reached Hayden by telephone. She begged him to accept the check. He again flatly refused.

"This is terrible—what shall we do," she cried, her face scarlet.

Then Mrs. Albion (her producer husband was prostrated backstage) once more stepped on the stage. She had heard there was a portable organ that could be used. She asked for a volunteer to play. Mme. Marie Zalipsky, local music teacher and opera producer, offered her services. Adolph Turner, Washington singer, agreed to direct.

The tiny organ was dragged onto the stage. At first it refused to work. When it did, it could hardly be heard. But the opera went on—on into the early morning hours.

Mrs. Albion said that Hansel and Gretel, scheduled tonight, would be canceled.

As the musicians filed out, they were met by more boos and catcalls.

"Go ahead—get out." "Don't come back." "Wait until next year at the watergate—we'll fix you." These were some of the comments directed at the departing players.

Albion History.

Edouard Albion launched his movement to develop a national opera company and national opera house soon after the war. Occasional performances grew more frequent until the climax in 1929. Up to that time he had produced opera in American, French, German and Italian. But then came reverses. Recently he made his debut on the concert stage with a recital in Constitution Hall.

Last night's demonstration in the audience was witnessed by the Ambassador from Brazil, the daughter of the Brazilian president, Senators, Representatives, military officials and the cream of Washington society.

Late efforts to reach Hayden for a statement were futile. The musicians' side was not presented. When a spokesman attempted to talk, the audience booed him down.

Citizens Group Condemn Bill For Race Bets

The Petworth Citizens Association last night voted to oppose passage of the Norton bill to legalize horse racing in the District of Columbia. Such legislation, the association held, would not be consistent with the city's present crusade against the "numbers racket" and other forms of gambling that make the poor poorer.

The association urged that membership in the Federation of Citizens Associations be limited to neighborhood citizens' associations. It also urged that a loop service be installed on Seventh street, Florida avenue, Ninth or Eleventh streets, and on Pennsylvania avenue to handle rush-hour traffic.

Miles S. Bray was named chairman of the police committee; Mrs. Estelle B. Schwartz, chairman of the public welfare committee, and Albert Langerman, chairman of the committee on national representation. George W. Potter again was appointed to make arrangements for the annual banquet.

Baker Named Manager Here for Wilson Line

L. C. Campbell, vice president and general manager of the Wilson Line, Inc., yesterday announced that at the annual meeting of the board of directors in Wilmington, Del., Harry H. Baker, was re-appointed district manager for the line.

Plans are going forward for the coming season and a number of local organizations have reserved excursion dates.

Walter Bastian Is Elected Head Of District Bar

The election of Walter M. Bastian as president of the District Bar Association was announced last night at a meeting at the Willard Hotel. Mr. Bastian, treasurer of the association for many years, defeated Paul E. Lesh. He succeeds H. Winship Wheatley.

In the contest for first vice president, Austin Canfield defeated Louis M. Denit. T. E. Lodge was elected second vice president over Louis Ottenberg; George C. Gertman was named secretary over Charles E. Ford, and Bolitho J. Louis, treasurer, over Chapin Bauman.

James C. Wilkes, Dean H. Stanley and Thomas Gillespie Walsh were elected to the board of directors.

Bastian is a native of Washington. He received his bachelor of laws degree from Georgetown University and his master of laws degree from the National University Law School.

He was admitted to the bar in 1913. After the World War, when he was a first lieutenant in the Chemical Warfare Service, he returned to his law practice. His offices now are in the National Press Building. He is a lecturer on the subjects of evidence and legal ethics at the National University Law School.

Decision Due Soon On Parking Statute

The right of the District Commissioners to impose parking restrictions as an aid to snow removal will be determined in traffic court Saturday.

Traffic Judge Gus A. Schuldt will hand down a ruling at that time, he announced yesterday in a test case brought by Charles E. Ford, a Washington attorney.

Ford was charged with violating the regulation which bans parking on certain main thoroughfares from 2 to 8 a. m. between January 1 and March 1. His attorneys have contended that the no parking signs are invalid when there is no snow.

Judge Schuldt announced he would take the case under advisement after a renewed plea by Assistant Corporation Counsel George D. Neilson.

Commission Selects Allen As Assessor

Moor Is Named by Party as New Superintendent of Insurance.

Political 'Deal' Smooths Way for Appointments to District Jobs.

Fred D. Allen, who has been an assistant assessor for the last 16 years, yesterday was appointed District assessor to succeed William P. Richards, who will retire February 12.

Appointment of Allen was a compromise by the commissioners. They were granted freedom to make their own appointment to that important District post in return for letting the national Democratic party machine name the new District superintendent of insurance.

J. Balch Moor, of Bonham, Tex., protege of Representative Sam Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas, was named superintendent of insurance to fill the vacancy caused by the appointment of John A. Marshall, the incumbent, as executive director of the District unemployment compensation commission. Moor will take office when Marshall assumes his post as compensation director, which will be as soon as funds for operation of the unemployment commission are made available.

Harold D. Scanlin, also an assistant assessor with long experience, was Allen's leading competitor for the post. Allen's selection reportedly was based upon his longer experience in District assessment work.

Allen, who is 44, began his service with the District in 1915 as a civilian stnographer in the District Workhouse at Occoquan, Va. He is a native of Bloomfield, Ky. He holds law degrees from National University Law School, but never has practiced law. His home is at 3359 Quesada street northwest.

Moor, it was understood, was backed for the insurance post by every member of the Texas Congressional delegation with the exception of Representativ Blanton.

the insurance business, including work as an adjuster in fire and casualty claims and many years in life insurance.

He came to Washington a year ago to take a position with the National Recovery Administration as deputy administrator. He lives at 1426 Twenty-first street northwest.

Moor is a thirty-second degree Mason and a member of the Shrine. Mrs. Moor, he told a reporter last night, is a resident of the District.

Moor is a descendant of the Bullock family and is a distant relative of the late Theodore Roosevelt.

Car of Singing Youth Hits Funeral Cortege

Hazen in Police Auto Watches Machine, Filled With Gay Boys Approach Near Disaster on Road.

(Editor's note: In an effort to determine the answer to Washington's present traffic problem, with its mounting toll of accidents, The Post has assigned a reporter to learn the reason behind violations of traffic regulations. A reporter, accompanied by an official of the Police Traffic Division, is cruising in a police car. Motorists who violate the law are stopped. Their side of the story is recorded. It is The Post's desire merely to learn "the reason why" of violations. This is the twelfth in a series of stories.)

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Youth and trouble rode together yesterday—youth behind the steering wheel, and trouble with each violation of a District traffic regulation.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen accompanied our daily traffic cruise. He watched with interest as we twisted our way past double parkers, loitering taxicabs and jaywalking pedestrians. He listened intently as law-breaking motorists attempted to answer the "reason why" with feeble apologies and aimless excuses.

And he nodded approval when Policeman C. L. Smith, traffic division, our police "observer," ordered violators to meet us at the nearest precinct station.

Things went smoothly during the first half hour of our tour. Then came the infractions. With willful disregard for law, life or property, careless drivers invited disaster by taking a chance on streets coated with ice and slush.

We were cruising along on Florida avenue northwest. Behind us, a horn started to toot. We drew to the right. Past us sped an automobile. Three young men sat in the front seat, and three more in the rear. They were laughing and singing. They even grinned at us from the rear window of their speeding machine. In and out of traffic, the offending machine weaved and careened.

We stopped for a red traffic signal. By the time we were again under way, the car and its youthful occupants had gained several blocks. As we neared Eckington place northeast, the machine ahead of us turned suddenly to the right.

And then came the trouble. Skidding in the slush and melting ice, the driver applied his brakes. But too late. The car crashed into the last machine of a funeral procession.

The procession had stopped to allow passengers to board a street car. The victim of this accident was caught unawares. He was seated at the wheel of his car waiting calmly for the machines ahead to move. And then he was thrown violently against the steering wheel.

Shaken and bruised, he stepped into the street to face the heedless driver behind him. As we approached, several youths—the oldest probably 19—crawled from the striking car and walked away. They didn't return.

The young and thoughtless driver, who said he was 17, was left to face the music. He was questioned by Policeman Smith, while Commissioner Hazen stood by.

"We figured something like this would happen when you sped past us on Florida avenue," said Smith. "What's the matter—why did you strike this other car?"

"I was talking to my friends and I guess I had my head turned for a minute," was the confession. "I didn't see the other car until it was too late."

The youth said he "didn't realize he was speeding before the accident."

"Anyway," he added, looking at Policeman Smith, "How can you arrest me? You didn't see the crash."

Smith showed the young driver "how" he could be arrested by accompanying him to the Second Precinct station. There, the youth was charged with failing to keep his car under emergency control.

His "friends," who a few minutes before had been laughing and joking as the car sped past us, vanished in the crowd which gathered at the scene. They didn't even take the trouble to learn what the charge was going to be.

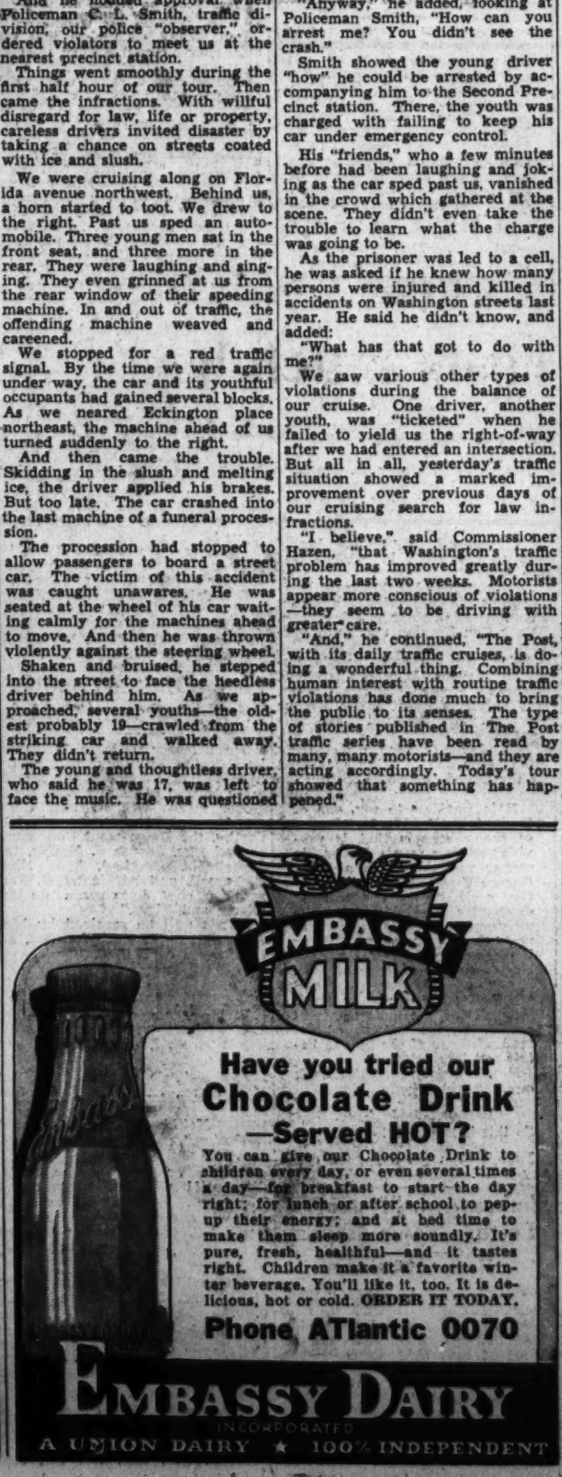
As the prisoner was led to a cell, he was asked if he knew how many persons were injured and killed in accidents on Washington streets last year. He said he didn't know, and added:

"What has that got to do with me?"

We saw various other types of violations during the balance of our cruise. One driver, another youth, was "ticketed" when he failed to yield us the right-of-way after we had entered an intersection. But all in all, yesterday's traffic situation showed a marked improvement over previous days of our cruising search for law infractions.

"I believe," said Commissioner Hazen, "that Washington's traffic problem has improved greatly during the last two weeks. Motorists appear more conscious of violations—they seem to be driving with greater care.

"And," he continued, "The Post, with its daily traffic cruises, is doing a wonderful thing. Combining human interest with routine traffic violations has done much to bring the public to its senses. The type of stories published in The Post traffic series have been read by many, many motorists—and they are acting accordingly. Today's tour showed that something has happened."



J. R. Kane, 61, Dead; Tenth Auto Victim

Crushed Chest Is Fatal to Man Run Down on January 8.

Walter Pike Succumbs; Autopsy Is Ordered to Fix Cause.

The tenth traffic fatality of the month was registered yesterday with the death of James R. Kane, 61, of 409 Third street northwest, of injuries suffered January 8.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald also ordered an autopsy in the case of Walter Pike, 55, who died suddenly yesterday of what physicians believe may have been injuries suffered in an automobile accident last October.

Kane died in Garfield Hospital of a crushed chest, suffered when he was knocked down by an automobile in the 300 block of New Hampshire avenue northwest.

The driver of the car, police say, was Max Fulton, 28, of 512 Columbia road, who is charged with reckless driving. He is at liberty under $1,000 bond.

Pike died yesterday at the Eastern Star Home. He was employed there as a janitor. While washing windows he collapsed. Emergency Hospital doctors pronounced him dead. After learning that he had been in an automobile accident last October, Dr. MacDonald ordered an autopsy.

Thaw to Clear Streets.

Icy sidewalks and slippery roadbeds are expected to be cleared by a thaw forecast for today by the Weather Bureau.

Slightly warmer weather and rain or snow is the forecast. Temperatures are expected to be much higher than the low of 17 degrees recorded yesterday at 7:15 a. m.

Only one fall on the icy pavements was reported yesterday. Arlington Custer, 40, of 40 Sherman Circle, was treated at Emergency Hospital for a dislocated shoulder suffered when he fell on the sidewalk near Ninth and G streets northwest.

John Campbell, 67, of 224 Eleventh street northeast, a guard captain at the District Jail, remained in a critical condition at Casualty Hospital, from injuries received Monday when he slipped and fell against a moving car.

New Traffic Light.

Installation of a traffic light at the intersection of First street and Michigan avenue northwest was authorized by the District Commissioners yesterday.

Southeast Pushes Fight for Bridge

The Southeast Business Men's Associations and the citizens associations of east Washington yesterday joined hands in urging the District appropriations sub-committee of the House and Senate to approve an item for engineering investigation for the replacement of the old Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge. The item was approved by the Budget Bureau.

Under the signature of Richard B. English, chairman of the executive committee of the Business Men's Association, the letter pointed out that 14,622 families, comprising 67,337 people, live in southeast Washington and pay 15½ per cent of the city's taxes. Yet only 3 per cent of the tax revenue has been expended in that area for improvements.

The citizens of southeast Washington, English said, do not request a pretentious bridge "but merely an adequate, safe structure."

Evelyn Laye, Blonde British Singing Star, Will Make Dramatic Debut Here Feb. 24

Singer Becomes Actress; 'A Day' for Gotham; Chat of Theaters.

By Nelson B. Bell.

One of the surprises of the season in the legitimate theater will be the appearance in the National Theater the week of Monday, February 24, of Evelyn Laye, blonde beauty of the English stage, in her first dramatic role.

It was not so long ago that Miss Laye was seen on the screen of the Belasco Theater in the stellar role of "Evensong," the film story of a grand opera diva of waning brilliance, which established her in many minds as an actress of the first rank, as well as a singer whose vocal accomplishments are not to be lightly brushed aside.

In this subject Miss Laye betrayed an unsuspected ability to grow old in a part requiring that devastating service on the part of a vibrant and beautiful young actress. There are not too many who can accomplish this annoying trick successfully. Miss Laye's revelation of her power to act, as well as sing, promises much for the integrity of her performance in her first dramatic role.

Second Subscription Offering.

The vehicle in which she will make her debut as the second of the subscription attractions of the American Theater Society of Washington, will be "Sweet Aloes," a play that is controlled in this country by Lee Ephraim, the co-producer with the Theater Guild of "Call It a Day," the Dodie Smith comedy, current at the National.

In this play the blondely lovely Miss Laye will be supoprted by a cast of the first rank. Prominent in her support will be such able mimes as John Littel, former leading man of the National Theater Players and last seen here with Osgood Perkins as the wild aviator in "Ceiling Zero;" Dorothy Mackaill, the former English chorus girl, who became one of the principal ornaments of the Ziegfeld "Follies" and later a screen star of the first magnitude, and others of comparable note.

It is expected that Miss Laye will arrive in Washington this morning. Mr. Ephraim, along with Theresa Helburn and Lawrence Langner, of the Theater Guild, already is here.

More Will Be Printed.

There will, of course, be interviews, speculations, prognostications and whatnot, before "Sweet Aloes" opens. Much of this, I hope, will be reported here. Perhaps all of it.

At any rate, another premieire is on the books and a star whose achievements encompass a considerable field of endeavor is about to become known to us in person.

It all adds up to further distinction for a season that has been prolific, so far, in providing events that will prove memorable as time goes on.

Speaking of Miss Helburn and Mr. Langner of the Theater Guild, as we were only a few words back, they are so sure of the substantial merit of "Call It a Day," the current charade at the National, that they are taking it straight into New York after this initial week's minor tinkering. This seems about as it should be.

"Call It a Day" is a delightful experience in the theater—a shrewdly casted, well written and thoroughly literate three hours of intelligent fun. The piece, to be sure, is being pruned slightly during its tenancy of the National, its action is being speeded up and the entr'acte waits are being restricted to reasonable periods. Some 20 minutes or so were taken out of the running time last night without in the least impairing the dramatic effectiveness of one of the season's most engaging comedies.

By the time the play reaches New York it will be in perfect running order and, I dare say, one of the outstanding hits of the Broadway season. It deserves no less.

"Rose" Rides and Sings.

So now we know precisely what they mean by "horse opera."

Having previewed the musical screen version of "The Rose of the Rancho," the romantic melodrama of the early days in Southern California, originally written by Richard Walton Tully and the late David Belasco as the first stellar vehicle for Frances Starr under the Belasco banner, I am now able to say that this thundering exposition of the "land-grabber" problem in the lives of the early Spanish landowners, at least, preserves the title of a once authentic, but slightly flamboyant drama.

Little beyond the title remains of the dramatic version of "The Rose of the Rancho." The role created by Charles Richman is played with vocal eminence and a wishy-washy sort of emotional realism by John Boles; Charles Bickford, one of the cinema's better roughnecks, appears in the role originally played by Hamilton Revelle, and so the casting goes, all down the line.

Those Phantom Orchestras.

The musical interpolations are unfailingly accompanied by one of those invisible and unaccountable symphony orchestras that spring up out of nowhere and lend melodious warmth to scenes in which they could not possibly participate under any rational circumstances.

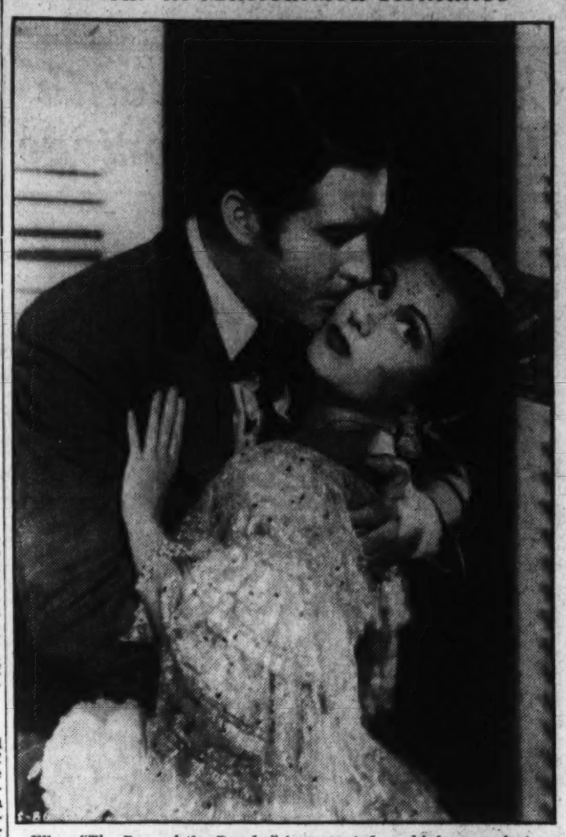
Gladys Swarthout makes a pleasant impression as a singing adventuress of the old Spanish aristocrary, who assumes the role of bandit to prevent the sacking of the ancestral estates by a gang of desperadoes, but cannot be said to nudge Lily Pons, Jeanette MacDonald or Grace Moore off the distinguished cinema-operatic pedestals which they already occupy by virtue of such trifles as "I Dream Too Much," "Naughty Marietta" and "One Night of Love."

There is a tremendous amount of free shooting and fancy riding during the revamped action of this once honorable play, and a comedy note that is understressed is struck resoundingly as often as opportunity permits by the droll Herb Williams and the dialectic Willy Howard.

A complete and, I hope, expository review of this pretentious making over of a colorful play will appear in this space on Saturday—the gods being propitious.

Order your copy early. (Advt.)

Costar in Musicalized Romance



When "The Rose of the Rancho" is presented as chief screen feature for the new week at Loew's Fox Theater, beginning Friday, many alluring melodies will be heard sung by Gladys Swarthout, former star of the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company, and John Boles, graduate pupil of Jean de Reske, former leading tenor of the same organization. They are pictured here in one of the romantic scenes in this chromatic rendition of the play by Richard Walton Tully and the late David Belasco, which served as the first individual starring vehicle for Frances Starr, the present Mrs. R. Golden Donaldson, of Washington.

It may seem a crudely commercial note to be sounded at just this time, but the fact is inescapable that the lamented death of His Majesty King George V, of England, undoubtedly will have a definite box-office effect upon the career of that exceptional bit of vignetting known as "Victoria Regina," in which Helen Hayes recently opened here and now is triumphing on Broadway.

Queen Victoria, of course, was the grandmother of the King who just has plunged the world into grief by his death; the great-grandmother of Edward VIII, who ascends to the throne. A great deal is intimate, kindly and revelatory of the ruler who lent her name to an era is disclosed in "Victoria Regina." It will take an added interest by reason of its immediate approach to the most important news event of the day.

From Victoria stemmed the most dominant notes that have characterized the monarchial rule of Europe since her death. Edward VII was a king who, as Prince of Wales, promised little and contributed much, to the welfare and aggrandizement of his empire. He was Vitcoria's son. The late George V was King Edward's son and now comes Edward VIII.

What is written in the stars? Or is anything written there? Something assuredly will be written at the ticket wicket!

A Leading Leading Man.

Tonight and tomorrow night, when the newly organized Capital Players present Noel Coward's "The Young Idea" at Pierce Hall, there will appear in the role of Hiram J. Walkin a well-known local player who has appeared in amateur dramatics in Washington for the last eight years.

His name is Harry A. Westcott and he will be best remembered by local audiences for his characterization of Sol Fitzmaurice in "Both Your Houses," the part of Otis Bradford in "Harbor Light" and as old Tobit in "Tobias and the Angel."

Others in the cast include Romaine Stevens, Dick Stringfellow, Clarence Moore, Carlisle Smyth, Kay Palmer, Crystal Tardy, Arthur Westover and Mildred Franckenberg.

The play has been directed by John Mann and is being sponsored by the Bekefi-Deleporte Institute.

It is, needless to say, one of the notable fields of endeavor of the newsreels that is provided when a monarch dies. No sooner was the death of King George V announced than practically all the major producing companies trafficking in the purveyance of "hot" news had reels on the screen visualizing the complete span of the dead King's quarter-century of rule. Paramount, Fox-Movietone and all the rest are among those who rivaled the newspapers in getting to the screens of the land what we of the Fourth Estate put into print.

It was fast and skillful work on both sides.

Personal-Aside Note.

Audience Won By Miss Bacon In Piano Recital

500 at Howard University Give Warm Reception to Her Program.

Katherine Bacon, pianist, brought a clearly enunciated program of music to Rankin Memorial Chapel, Howard University, last night, and an audience of 500 students and friends were no less outspoken in their warm reception of her numbers.

She played with skill that enabled her to course ably through a program that represented most of the musical eras from the early Gluck to the modern Skryabin.

In addition a flare for the lyrical in her music gave her particular eloquence whenever the singing quality was important. For this reason the "Andante" movement was the most successfully interpreted part of the Beethoven "Pastorale" sonata, and the Chopin group, because of its romantic flavor, turned out to be the most interesting part of the program.

Beginning with a Gluck Caprice on airs from "Alceste" arranged by Saint-Saens, Miss Bacon proceeded immediately to an Intermezzo (Opus 118, No. 6), and a Caprice (Opus 76, No. 2) by Brahms, then concluded her first group with a Hutcheson arrangement of Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream" Scherzo. In these the artist had several opportunities to display her dexterity and her ability to heighten its effectiveness by an unaffected manner.

The Chopin group included the Ballade in F Minor, Opus 52; Nocturne in B Major, Opus 9, No. 3, and the Scherzo in C sharp minor, Opus 39.

For a last group Miss Bacon introduced interesting contrast through four modern selections: Fairy Tale "Ride of the Knights," Medtner; Etude in D sharp Minor, and Prelude in G minor, by Scryabin, and "Naila" Valse, by Delibes (Dehnanyi arrangement).—J. W.

Burton Holmes Journeys Down Southern Lanes

Second Travelogue Traces West Coast of South American Continent.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"THE WEST COAST OF SOUTH AMERICA." Second of a series of five Tuesday afternoon travelogues by Burton Holmes in the National Theater. Delivered beginning at 4:30 p. m. Illustrated with still and motion-picture views by Mr. Holmes and Ewing Galloway; with coloring of South American scenes by Mildred Petry; Guatemala series by the Van Allens Studios. Production by Merritt M. Mitchell. Lectures under the direction of William M. Westcott, New York City.

It was an illuminating, but slightly monotonous, repetition of rugged Andean Mountain vistas that Burton Holmes made the major feature of his second travelogue in a series of five in the National Theater yesterday afternoon, when he coursed the West Coast of South America on an air junket that in due time will trace the complete outline of Latin-America and end, where it began, at the Newark Airport in New Jersey.

The airplane jumps were so rapid and so picturesque that the casual spectator found it difficult to comprehend that one moment he was in Newark, the next in Miami and the next in Havana, on his way to Guatemala, Salvador, Buena Ventura, Cuzco, Machu Pichu, the city restored to civilization by Hiram Bingham, and the other colorful ports of call at which the speaker paused, rhetorically, to permit his hearers to feast their eyes on scenes of unaccustomed beauty and interest.

This writer is quite in consonance with Mr. Holmes' mild rebuke of Washington "traveloguers," to the effect that it is surprising how few people turn out to learn of far places with which they are so unfamiliar. The talk deserved a larger audience than it attracted.

Andean Granduers.

There can be no gainsaying the picturesque grandeur that attaches to a great deal that Mr. Holmes included in his talk yesterday.

The Andes are imposing natural structures that soar to the greatest heights of any mountain ranges on the Western Hemisphere. Snow-capped peaks, nevertheless, have a capacity for monotony that is comparable with too many motor cars stretched out in a row—even if they are next year's models.

There is a revelation of modernity and an almost complete abandonment of the sequestered customs of remote peoples in Mr. Holmes' picturing of the cities of Santiago, Valparaiso, Magellan and the other points upon which he permits his camera to focus, that both please and surprise the spectator who thinks the Northern Hemisphere contains all of the world's erudition.

There is not a hair's breadth of difference between the two sides of the equator, one surmises, after listening to Mr. Holmes on this tour.

If the west coast of South America is not his sprightliest essay at verbal description of a picturesque continental mileage, perhaps it is because the west coast of South America lacks that variety of contour and terrain essential to a wholly variegated and enlivening discourse.

Sylvia Sydney, Husband Agree to 'Call It Off'

Hollywood, Jan. 21 (U.P.).—Sylvia Sydney, brown-eyed film actress, and her husband, Bennet Cerf, New York publisher, have separated, she announced tonight. They were married in Phoenix, Ariz., October 1, 1935.

Miss Sydney arrived home last week from New York. She said she and Cerf agreed to "call it off."

"We decided we made a mistake," she explained, "and agreed to separate now. No plans have been made for a divorce."

Cerf at present is in New York. The publisher flew from New York to Phoenix to meet Miss Sydney, who flew there from Hollywood in a widely-heralded "air-minded romance."

Group Opposes Maryland Road Side-Tracking

Scores in Prince Georges Ask Highway Over Old Rail Bed.

Scores of Prince Georges County citizens yesterday petitioned the county's board of commissioners for support in establishing a highway over the roadbed of the abandoned W. B. & A. Railroad.

The only unharmonious note in the wholesale request came from a delegation from Bowie, Md., which feared the Lanham-Severn road, now under construction, might be diverted from its course to the new route.

The delegation, consisting of Noah Joffe, Lee Van Horn, and Edward Perkins, argued that the original intentions of the road promoters would be frustrated if the Lanham-Severn highway were side-tracked.

No Move Planned.

After a lengthy conference with the commissioners at board headquarters at Upper Marlboro, the men were assured no such move was contemplated for the near future.

Several hundred other county residents made their appeal for the highway in writing. There were two formal petitions bearing the names of these persons.

On one, W. D. Hines, principal of the Maryland Park High School, Seat Pleasant, made the notation that a number of students had left the high school because of the abandonment of the railroad, and that a number of others were expected to leave.

This petition gave four reasons why the highway should be constructed: First, that there are 12 or 15 communities along this route which are now without transportation facilities.

Decrease Is Charged.

Second, that property values along the route will decrease in value without ingress or egress; third, there would be a material increase in the assessible basis of the property, and fourth, that "a large colored school" had been constructed along the route and was now seriously handicapped. This evidently referred to the Bowie Normal School.

The board of commissioners also received a petition yesterday from the County Wide Parent-Teachers Association Federation asking not only the restoration of the remaining 5 per cent of the county teachers' salaries, but an additional $20 a month more for each teacher.

"The salary they are now getting does not allow them enough to carry them through the vacation months, nor sufficient funds for summer school attendance," the petition said.

Attorney Retained.

The recurring problem of where to establish a dumping ground in the metropolitan area of Prince Georges County struck another snag yesterday.

Robert W. McCullough, Cheverly, (Md.), attorney, announced he had been retained by residents and property owners in and around Tuxedo, Md., and would file an injunction suit against the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission restraining the use of the legislatively-established dump in that vicinity.

"Dumping of refuse in the metropolitan area is a very serious and difficult problem," said McCullough. "The people in our section certainly do not want such a nuisance in their back yard."

The dumping ground is located at the intersection of River road and the Tuxedo road, near the District Line. The Sanitary Commission selected the site after the State Legislature authorized the establishment of a central dump for the metropolitan area.

Citizenships Granted.

United States citizenships were granted five persons who appeared in the Prince Georges County Circuit Court yesterday for final examination.

The list included John Nicholas Pantelogu, who was allowed to change his name to John Paulos Nicholas; Hubert Lucke, Michael O'Brien, Emma Eleanor Hofman and George Edward Butler.

Nicholas, a resident of Beltsville, Md., was born in Turkey; Lucke, of Hyattsville, was born in Germany; O'Brien, of Riverdale, was born in Ireland; Mrs. Hofman, of Mount Rainier, Germany, and Butler, of Edmonston, was born in England.

Others who filed application for hearing next June were Albian Victor Krewatch, of the University of Maryland extension service, a Canadian, who was allowed to change his name to "Albert."

Watching Them Make Pictures.

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

GRACE MOORE is making her new flicker, tentatively called "Cissy," but which will be changed to "Princess Charming." The picture is being directed by Josef von Sternberg, and therefore the set of "Princess Charming" is a place where "artist meets artist" and anything may happen.

The set for this particular sequence represents an amusement park in Vienna; the scenic railway is made in the form of a dragon. Miss Moore, playing the role of the Princess Elizabeth, goes for a ride with the Prince of Austria, played by Franchot Tone. Miss Moore is the poor royalty from the small town, and she is not recognized by Tone.

Director von Sternberg is also the cameraman. He loks through the camera, toys with it, and works it himself to shoot the scene. "All right, darling, we'll try it now." "Yes, dear," she answers. It is Director von Sternberg and Grace Moore talking to each other. • • • •

Miss Moore, Mr. Tone and the troupe of extras play the scene. They play it again and again. On the set, dressed in the same costume as Grace Moore, is her best friend, Mrs. Duncan Draper. Mrs. Draper was always a visitor on the sets of "One Night of Love" and "Love Me Forever." She has become interested in the movies, and is now working as stand-in for Grace Moore. The entire troupe plays the scene again and again for Director von Sternberg. When he calls for it to be done again Miss Moore says: "Another take?" Von Sternberg answers: "We didn't have a take yet. Those were all rehearsals."

• • • •

Between takes or rehearsals, I sit and talk to Grace Moore. She is excited about this picture and fond of it. "I want you to hear the music," she says. "It is lovely." The music was written by Fritz Kreisler, and Miss Moore will not sing any arias. The American lyrics were written by Dorothy Fields, Miss Moore said that her favorite song is "Stars in My Eyes."

I will have to wait a while to hear Grace Moore sing, for she won't record the songs until she finishes the picture. This is an unusual procedure for her. She first recorded the songs for her previous flickers and then played her role. For "Princess Charming," however, Miss Moore will do direct recording; that is, she will sing the songs before the camera while acting. She will not sing them in the recording room and then pretend to sing them before the camera, making the gestures to the playback. This is the usual method.

• • • •

Miss Moore explained that Director von Sternberg made a screen test of her singing, direct recording, and she didn't make ugly grimaces while singing. This has been the big drawback to direct recording. The screen demands that a singer look pretty even when reaching for a high note.

Director von Sternberg summons the players and they get ready to do the scene again. Von Sternberg gives his orders. Then he shouts: "Every time I say something some one says "shhh' at me."

The scene is played. "That was perfect, darling, perfect." "I believe I can do it better," answers Grace Moore. The scene is played again, and Director von Sternberg admits Miss Moore has surprised him. This is what happens when "artist meets artist."

• • • •

Marc Connelly is speaking with a dialect as he gives directions to a small colored cherub, who is perched on a cloud for a scene in "The Green Pastures." This cloud keeps sailing and bumps into another cloud on which sit two colored men, fishing.

The clouds are like overstuffed pillows. They are held suspended in the air by piano wire and, worked by an overhead trolley. It is one of the many sequences in the flicker which was only talked about in the stage version. Director Connelly says that the picture is fascinating to him because everything he wanted to do on the stage can be done now. The scope of the play has been enlarged. It has yet to be proved that one picture is worth many fine spoken words.

Rex Ingram, who is playing the role of De Lawd, is on the set. Ingram is a big, impressive man, and as he stands there you realize that he is playing the most important part of any performer making a picture.

• • • •

Ingram made a hit on the New York stage in the role of Black Snake Johnson in "Stevedore." He was in pictures before, having played small parts in "King of Kings," "The Sign of the Cross," "Trader Horn" and many others. He has now returned to flickers to play a starring role.

The flicker version of "The Green Pastures" practically depends on his performance. And there is something about Rex Ingram which gives you faith. His face radiates goodness.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Dawn Patrol.

New York, Jan. 21.

NO PERFORMER who has come to these shores has been the victim of such undercover resentment as Josphine Baker, who was in the Ziegfeld Follies" . . . Jessica Pepper, Gloria Pierre, Helen Travis and other "Follies" eyefuls, however, say that she treated the chorus kids better than any other principal . . . On the last rainy night, her maid has a cab waiting at the stage door of the Forrest Theater in Philly . . . The Baker gal turned it over to a group of chorus girls. "You work harder than I do," she said . . . On stage, she had the most amazingly expressive face I've ever seen . . . She didn't fit in the "Follies" . . . It was too big for her small voice, and her material was bad . . . But I can understand why she was a sensation in Paris clubs . . . She IS a vivid personality . . . That's my opinion, but—it ain't necessarily so.

Fanny Brice's best thing in the "Follies" is the sweepstakes sketch . . . Generally, Fanny spends too much time mugging, twisting her face into Jewish caricatures . . . In this sketch, however, she "times" a stage walk so brilliantly that the audience comes to its feet in a roar of laughs and applause . . . You wonder why La Brice doesn't go for this type of comedy more frequently, relying on timing rather than face-twisting . . . That's my opinion, but of course—it ain't necessarily so.

• • • •

The two greatest night club men in their own specialties are not on Broadway . . . I'd say that Jack Lynch, at Philadelphia's Hotel Adelphia, is the greatest greeter" in the night club world . . . Six foot three inches tall and resplendent in dinner jacket or tails, Mr. Lynch runs the Cafe Marguery as a club should be run . . . His guests include everybody in the country . . . Contrast the charm and atmosphere which Lynch creates, with the semi-frigidity or total frigidity of Broadway clubs and you marvel that any of the Stem spots are still in business . . . If I owned a New York club, I'd sign Lynch to a contract, regardless of cost . . . And in the kitchen, or rather in charge of it, I'd place another Philadelphia expert—George Lamaze, who was wooed away from Broadway to run the Hotel Warwick.

• • • •

June and Cherry Preisser, sister team of dancers from N'Orleans, will be the toasts of the town when the "Follies" arrive . . . June, the tiny blonde, has grown up into an astonishingly attractive girl, and the addition of young Duke McHale to form a hoofing trio has benefited the set . . . Best screen bet I've seen in sometime is Josephine Leach, who dances with her hubby at the Adelphia . . . She is a combination of Billie Burke and Marlene Dietrich, the first American girl I've seen who possesses Miss Dietrich's greatest asset, femininity . . . She and her dancing hubby come from Houston, Tex., and John Robert Powers, who engages the highest priced professional models in the business, always has insisted that Texas air and sunshine produce the most stunning girls in the world . . . She justifies his belief.

• • • •

I hesitate to give these comparatively unknown performers a shove on the highroad to fame any more, because a group of small-time agents on Broadway have converted it into a racket . . . With no ability of their own to detect talent, these Ten Per Centers wait until such a column as this recommends a performer . . . Immediately, they rush to a phone or a telegraph office to contact the act, and sign it . . . There's one of these small-timey fellows operating in town, for whom I've done a lot of important favors . . . But I've just learned that this fellow, whose name is Paul Small, is now making a lot of these hopeful youngsters miserable by bulldozing them . . . If they won't sign a contract for him, or wish to break away from him, he threatens to have them blackballed from every Broadway night club . . . This is an ugly threat to make, but quite harmless actually, because this small-timer hasn't influence . . . If he or any other agent makes similar threats to you youngsters of the profession, let me know immediately—because I don't like guys like that.

• • • •

Vanishing vaudeville performers assert that the coldest audiences are in Kansas City and Philadelphia . . . I disagree . . . The toughest vaudeville audience was the 6 p. m. turnout at the RKO-Albee, in Brooklyn . . . The Chicago Palace and Loew's State rate evenly as the most enthusiastic . . . The 6,000-seater Roxy ranks next . . . Washington, D. C., and Philadelphia, I'd say, have the most discriminating vaude patrons, but if you give 'em what they want, they're all alike in their reactions—except that 6 p. m. show at the RKO-Albee . . . Ouch!!

• • • •

Night club story I like best is the one that actually happened not so many nights ago in one of the swanky east side spots . . . The headline performer came in, dejectedly surveyed the rows of empty tables . . . "Now, now don't get upset," consoled the owner of the place . . . "After all, we do an exclusive business. Only the finest people come to this club. We don't get any of the riff-raff—though the Lord knows, I've tried to get 'em."

Indians Refuse Yanks' $241,000 Bid for Vosmik and Averill

Buy, Not Sell, Is Desire of Bradley

Clubowner Says Offer Was Made at Meeting in December.

Asserts Amount Would Have Erased Club's 8-Year Deficit.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 21.—President Alva Bradley, of the Cleveland Indians Baseball Club, disclosed late today he had refused an offer of more than $241,000 by the New York Yankees for Left Fielder Joe Vosmik and Center Fielder Earl Averill.

"We are not trying to sell players, we are trying to buy them," said Bradley in disclosing the Yankees' offer for Vosmik and Averill, made at the Chicago baseball meeting in December.

Bradley said he told the Yankees' president, Col. Jacob Ruppert, that the Cleveland Baseball Club had lost $241,000 during his eight years' ownership.

Ruppert Consented.

Manager Joe McCarthy, of the Yanks, then offered to more than wipe out that deficit if Cleveland would sell Vosmik and Averill, Bradley reported today, saying that Ruppert had nodded agreement.

Bradley said he refused because "We want the Cleveland Club to be fighting it out for the pennant with Detroit and Boston rather than New York."

Joe Vosmik yesterday signed a three-year contract with the Cleveland Club at a 30 per cent increase in salary, it was reported by the Associated Press. Vosmik, who was runner-up to Buddy Myer for the American League batting championship, had been drawing $8,500.

Since their offer for Vosmik and Averill, the Yankees have strengthened their outfield by acquiring Roy Johnson, former Red Sox slugger, via Washington. Both Col. Ruppert and Manager McCarthy, of the New York Club, were in a mild state of panic at the time of the $241,000 offer to Cleveland for the two Indian outfielders.

The Boston Red Sox had just announced their trade with the Philadelphia Athletics which brought them Jimmy Foxx and Johnny Marcum and set themselves up as an added threat to the Yankees' pennant hopes when the Yanks attempted to buy Averill and Vosmik.

Capital Teams Face Heavy Week-End

Carnegie Courtmen and Boxers Meet Georgetown, Cardinals Here.

CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY courtmen leave this afternoon for a two-day visit to Philadelphia, where they meet LaSalle tonight and St. Joseph's tomorrow night, while other District quintets remain at home to do their debating before local audiences.

Georgetown's game Friday night with Carnegie Tech, at Tech High School, which may change the complex of the Eastern Conference standing, tops the local bill, but Catholic University's boxing match with the Plaid, and Maryland's double-header Saturday night at College Park will not want for patronage.

Maryland tackles two formidable rivals in North Carolina, which is sending its courtmen North to help supply the first part of the evening's activities, and the University of Miami, which will have it out with the boxers. The court game gets underway at 8:15 o'clock.

The Terps also have a better-than-average court battle listed tomorrow night in Washington College, which is fighting it out with Mount St. Mary's for the lead in the State basketball championship race. The Eastern Sho' five is enjoying one of its best campaigns in recent years and will make it interesting for Burt Shipley's men.

Georgetown will be the underdog against Carnegie's dribblers and Catholic U. will be a little better than even money against the glovemen the following night, but coaches of both District teams are hopeful of scoring upsets. A Georgetown victory may catapult Coach Fred Mesmer's men into the league lead.

Ex-College Stars Play Brewers Here

The Norport Crimsons, a combination of the former Norfolk Blue Devils and the Portsmouth Panthers, will clash with the Heurich Brewers in the Brewery gym next Sunday at 3:30 p. m., it was announced last night.

That the merging of the two outfits was a good idea is proven by the Crimsons' splendid record. They lost to the famed New York Celtics by a single point, 42 to 41, and are looking forward to their second triumph over the Brewers.

Henry Sturm and Tommy Johnson, former University of Virginia basketball and football captains, respectively, make Norport one of the most aggressive teams in the country. Only once in the last ten games have the Crimsons been held to less than 40 points.

Report Spiked, Cunningham Will Run

Star Miler to Defend His Wanamaker Crown February 1.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Definitely spiking reports he planned no further competition during the indoor track season, Glenn Cunningham let it be known today he would defend his thrice-won laurels in the Wanamaker mile of the annual Millrose A. A. meet in Madison Square Garden Februery 1.

With the receipt of Cunningham's entry, another fine field is assured for the Millrose fixture which the iron-thewed Kansan has won every time he has started—in 1933, 1934 and 1935.

Arrayed against him this time will be Gene Venzke, of the University of Pennsylvania, former world's indoor mile record-holder; Donald Lash, University of Indiana junior who holds the Western Conference championship and record of 4:14.4 as well as the conference indoor and outdoor 2-mile and National A. A. U. cross-country crowns, and Archie San Romani, Emporia State Teachers College youngster who came out of nowhere to capture the National Collegiate A. A. mile championship last year.

Another to be Invited.

One more ace will be invited to complete the field of five to which the Wanamaker is limited. Bill Bonthron would be the logical choice, but Bill is passing up indoor competition this year.

Cunningham, of course, will be the man to beat. Not only does he hold the world outdoor mile record of 4:06.7, the indoor mile record of 4:08.4 and the indoor 1,000 yards standing of 2:10.1, but he likewise has been the most consistent of the world's milers in the last three or four years. He has been clocked under 4:12 for the eight furlongs seven times and on four occasions has beaten 4:10.

America's outstanding contender for the Olympic 1500-meter run, Cunningham already has demonstrated conclusively he is in top condition. He was clocked in 4:16 in winning the mile at the Sugar Bowl meet at New Orleans and recently beat Chuck Hornbostel in 1:55.2 for 800 meters over a flat, unbanked armory track in Brooklyn.

Money

Basketball Begins To Reap Rewards; N. Y. U. Called Best.

By Jack Miley.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—College basketball, a steam-heated species of indoor entertainment that has frequently failed to pay its own freight in the past, is now bringing in the marbles. Folks around our town are working themselves into a lather over those knobby-kneed and arm-flapping athletes whose sole object in life seems to be to park that pigskin pumpkin in its twine tepee.

Capacity crowds of 20,000 are shouting themselves hoarse at the Saturday night games in Madison Square Garden and reports from the outlaying districts indicate that the dribble-and-dodge diversion is on the up-beat everywhere. Since, next to football these court calisthenics have become the biggest money makers for old Alma Mammy, we decided that a little research on the subject would provide a piece for the papers.

Accordingly, we sought out Mr. Ned Irish, an intelligent and energetic young sports promoter who has paid off his mortgage by whisking the wicket wizards for their small and drafty gyms to exhibit them at $2.20 per peek before the cognoscenti and carriage trade at the Garden.

But this baldish Barnum, who ballyhooed pro football to its present popularity during the last few years, knows all the answers about 1936 basketball and his remarks are so illuminating that we're passing them along to you as closely as we can recall them.

Pull up your chairs, Mr. Irish has the floor:

"New York has the finest teams in the country this winter. New York University, Long Island University and St. Johns are tops, in the order named. No other area of America has such standout squads.

I THINK Howard Canon's Violets are the best outfit in the world, and the Violets should go to the Olympics. They've beaten Kentucky, North Carolina and California, three great sectional squads. In the national picture, besides the Colonels and the Tarheels, I like Rice in the Southwest, who've already beaten Arkansas and Texas Christian, who forced them into a three-way tie last year.

Indiana and Purdue are still unbeaten in the Big Ten race. Notre Dame is a classy Midwestern machine. Purdue whipped the Nomads, but our Violets beat Purdue, which gives you a further line on their class. The Pacific Coast Conference doesn't look so hot to me. Temple has a pretty good outfit in Philadelphia."

Champion Dog Incorporated At $4,000

By the Associated Press

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 21. — The world champion boxer dog which John P. Wagner, of Milwaukee, imported from Germany three weeks ago has been incorporated at the purchase price, $4,000, with some of the Nation's best-known celebrities subscribing to stock at $1 a share.

The boxer, named Dorian von Marienhof of Mazelaine, was imported duty free for the purpose of improving the breed in the United States. Dorian won the world Sieger title at the International Dog Show held at Frankfort-in-Main last April.

The boxer is descended from the original European bulldog. From this animal the British developed the famous heavy-bodied, ferocious appearing English bulldog, whose undershot jaw belies the affection he bestows. The Germans developed the European bulldog into a terrier type. The boxer is agile, like the Doberman Pinscher, and is strong-jawed, but affectionate. He is used for police and military work in Germany.

200 Buy Stock.

Wagner, who plans to exhibit Dorian in the Westminster Kennel Club Show at Madison Square Garden in New York February 10 to 12, said 200 persons have subscribed for approximately 1,000 shares of stock. He expressed confidence stud fees and show ring prize money would pay a 100 per cent dividend within a year. Twenty engagements already have been booked.

Jack Dempsey is stockholder No. 1. He holds a $10 "piece" of Dorian. Other widely known stockholders, Wagner said, are Sally Rand, the fan dancer; George Whiting, the song writer; Princess der Ling, the writer; Jack Pearl, the comedian; Olson and Johnson, comedians; Theodore Damman, Wisconsin secretary of State; Charles A. Weber, Chicago politician, and J. P. Solman, Chicago capitalist.

Maryland Freshmen Beat Tech High, 35-13

The Maryland Freshman basketball team won its fourth victory in five starts yesterday, trouncing Tech High, 35 to 13, at Ritchie Coliseum. Although the high school took a 7-6 lead in the first quarter, it soon relinquished it, for the freshmen started going places so fast they had a 22-7 lead at half time.

Maj. Neyland Quits Army To Coach

$12,000 Pay Reported; First 'Test Case' of New Order.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Maj. Bob Neyland, the first West Pointer to forsake saber for pigskin under the new War Department ruling, announced his retirement from the Army today to accept a five-year contract as head football coach at the University of Tennessee.

Maj. Neyland's retirement, cabled up from the Canal Zone, was an historic choice, and one that may serve as precedent for such notables as Biff Jones at Oklahoma and Ralph Sasse at Mississippi State.

In this first test case, as it were, the officer-coach had to decide whether he wished to continue as a military man or as a grid pilot—now that the War Department has abolished the mild, but lucrative racket of combining the two jobs.

$12,000 a Year Salary.

Maj. Neyland chose the coaching position. In his announcement down at Balboa, the black-haired 6-footer declined to discuss the salary he will receive at Knoxville as mentor for the Volunteers. However, it was learned reliably that Coach Bob's salary will be $10,000 a year, with an additional $2,000 annually for expenses. This comes close to the yearly $15,000 which Neyland is understood to have asked, and it makes him one of the best paid coaches in the country.

Moreover, it is important to note that Maj. Neyland retired from the Army. He did not resign. And as a retired officer he will receive a monthly retirement remittance from the Army, based on his length of service. This happens to be 24 years. He entered West Point in 1912. Thus his combined income as a simon-pure coach will exceed by far his income as a simon-pure officer.

Money Not Major Factor.

However, it is doubtful if the money angle was the major factor in influencing Neyland to retire. Most men who enter West Point and who continue in the Army are not out after the money as are commercial-minded civilians. Athletics, particularly football, apparently had come to mean more to Maj. Bob than military matters.

He was one of the finest athletes ever turned out at the Point. He was the best pitcher in West Point history, and a fine end in football.

Pimlico to Boost Purses in Spring

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 21.—The Maryland Jockey Club at its 16-day meeting in the spring will distribute in purse moneys a total of $158,400—an average of $9,900 per day. This announcement was made today by Matthias L. Daiger, secretary and general manager at Pimlico.

One of the four specials to be renewed during this meeting—the famous old Dixie Stakes—will carry $5,000 more this year in added money than it carried last year.

The minimum purse this spring at Pimlico, Daiger said, will be $900, as compared with $800 last year. On each day of the meeting two races will carry $1,000 purses, and on each day not marked by a stakes there will be in addition to the $1,000 races, one of $1,200 value.

Waner Reported "Out of Danger"

By the Associated Press.

Oklahoma City, Jan. 21.—Lloyd Waner, "little poison" of the Pittsburgh Pirates outfield, was pronounced out of danger tonight after a sudden pneumonia attack.

Lloyd, younger brother of Paul Waner, a fellow outfielder with Pittsburgh, "has made the hill," his physician, Dr. Leonard C. Williams, said.

Waner developed pneumonia Saturday. His wife said he contracted a cold at a hockey game.

U. S. Expends 340 Million On Sports

8,376 Separate Projects on Program; Some Already Finished.

By Dillon L. Graham,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

SPORT project allotments have sliced into the Government's $4,000,000,000 work relief fund for more than $340,000,000 in the last six months.

On the theory that outdoor life builds better bodies, that construction gives employment and that millions of citizens will be benefited, the Government has spent or agreed to spend on sport projects, since last July 1, a total of $340,059,174.

The Works Progress Administration said today President Roosevelt had approved outlays for athletic fields, parks, stadiums, swimming pools, golf courses, armories, tennis courts, and game, fish and bird work.

The allotments devote to sportsmen and youngsters approximately 9 per cent of the huge total appropriated by Congress last session.

Some of the projects already are finished, construction is under way on others, while work has not yet begun on many. The program calls for 8,376 separate projects.

Of the entire allotment, $8,607,730 comes under sport indirectly through expenditures on game, fish and birds, although all such monies eventually will aid the rod and gun sportsman.

Allotted to Parks.

By far the bulk of the money—$306,463,429—has been allotted to parks, which include baseball and football fields, etc., and various equipment for other sports and for the entertainment of boys and girls on playgrounds.

The building of swimming pools throughout the country and the improvement of bathing beaches calls for $11,114,690.

For athletic fields $8,916,485 has been put aside, while another $8,956,840 was allotted to miscellaneous projects under the sports classification.

Capital Golf Body To Map '36 Plans

Behind closed doors the executive committee of the District Golf Association will meet tonight to discuss plans for the forthcoming season. The committee will meet at the home of Tom Belshe, of Indian Spring, president, at 8 o'clock.

Among those who will attend are Maj. Kendall J. Fielder, of Army and Navy, and Marty West, of Columbia, vice presidents; Dr. W. S. Barr, of Washington, secretary treasurer; Dr. Bruce L. Taylor, sr., of Congressional; Al Steinem, of Woodmont, and O. L. Veerhoff, of Washington.

The annual meeting will take place at the Racquet Club February 3, at which time West is expected to be elected president. Fielder is in line for the post, but his duties at Fort Meade, Md., will prevent him from accepting, it is understood.

Invitation tournaments and the amateur status of various golfers will be discussed. Among the clubs expected to submit bids for invitation events are Washington, Columbia, Belle Haven and Chevy Chase.

POVICH.

AMONG the fancy and assorted hokum that goes hand in hand with sports is the business of the big league ball teams' spring training. Its primary purpose is the two solid months of ballyhoo for the national game that the presence of the ball clubs in the South evokes. As a conditioning process, it can stand a lot of debunking.

Any college football coach in the land will guarantee to put his squad of athletes in top physical condition in three or four weeks of steady training. A man training for a heavyweight championship fight, probably the most exacting business in all athletics, rarely requires more than a month of diligent training. Track athletes, basketball players, tennis performers and dozens of other types of athletes whose tasks are far more strenuous than ball players wouldn't know what to do with two months of practice.

But spring training, the magnates have learned, is a swell build-up for the season's games that are to follow. No other industry in the world receives the same amount of free publicity. Newspapermen and photographers are encamped on the trail of the ball teams from the moment they entrain for the Southland, and to justify their presence along with the team, copy and pictures flow copiously.

When Pop Anson first originateed spring training back in the 80s, there was ample excuse for a long siege of practice. His players were hog fat and otherwise sadly out of condition from their winter of hibernation. But the modern ball player realizes the necessity for keeping in shape. He knows his success is directly dependent on his physical condition. Nowadays, any man reporting to camp more than 10 pounds overweight causes talk.

SPRING training being what it is, and baseball writing being what it is, this department is able at this time to set down chronoligically just what will occur in a general way during the Washington club's spring sojourn at Orlando, Fla.

February 23—The Orlando Boys' Club Band greets the six rookie hurlers who detrain as the advance guard of the Washington club. The mayor gives Clark Griffith the keys to the city.

February 24—The boys from force of habit start reading the menu from right to left until they remember that they are eating at the expense of Clark Griffith.

February 25—Trainer Mike Martin declares he won't let a player set foot in the field until the city authorities do something about the gopher holes in both the infield and outfield.

February 26—Two uninvited rookies hitch-hike into camp, are given uniforms and are sent on their way that evening while Clark Griffith takes the stump for his annual speech to the effect that no lad who ever wandered into a training camp was ever any account as a ball player.

March 2—Clark Griffith declares that Harry Oates, the big right-handed protege of Buck Newsom, is the slickest rookie he's ever seen and will be a star before the 1936 season closes.

March 6—Harry Oates is released to Joe Engel's Chattanooga club which plans to send him to Panama City for seasoning.

March 7—Both Sammy Holbrook and Billy Starr have crowded Cliff Bolton out of the regular catching berth and Bolton has suffered 18 brain concussions attempting to catch pop fouls.

March 9—Bolton smacked three home runs in practice and is sure to be the team's regular catcher this season.

March 14—First Baseman Joe Kuhel has been ordered out of uniform for two days to rest his injured ankle from which he has never fully recovered.

March 17—Cecil Travis has beaten out all opposition for the regular shortstop berth and Bucky Harris declares that he will be a sensation among the American League shortstops in 1936.

March 20—A failure at shortstop, Cecil Travis will return to his old post at third base, according to Bucky Harris, who admits that Rookie Buddy Lewis is a disappointment at the position.

March 24—Buddy Lewis is installed as the team's regular 1936 third baseman. Bucky Harris, hoping to instill confidence in the rookie, has told him flatly the job is his. Travis is now a confirmed candidate for the outfield.

March 28—Monte Weaver and Pete Appleton are now regarded as sure bets to take regular turns on the Washington pitching staff, their work in practice games having deeply impressed Harris.

April 1—The team breaks camp for the trek North and surplus talent is shipped back to the Nats' Chattanooga and Albany farms. Chattanooga gets Appleton; Weaver goes to Albany.

Canzoneri 3-1 Choice Over Garcia Tonight

New York, Jan. 21 (AP).—Risking only his prestige, Tony Canzoneri, lightweight boxing champion, meets Bregio Garcia, Mexican 135-pound titleholder, in a 10-round non-title bout at the Star Casino tomorrow night. Garcia has agreed to come in over the titleweight limit.

Canzoneri, who hopes to get a chance at Barney Ross' welterweight crown, is expected to enter the ring a 3-to-1 choice to whip the little Mexican.

Olympics Lure 'Keepsie Crews

By the United Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—A free trip to Europe and possible Olympic glory is the lure which may result in the largest Poughkeepsie regatta in history, it was disclosed today.

The board of stewards of the Intercollegite Rowing Association, governing body of the Hudson River classic, which had its inaugural in 1895, announced definite if unofficial assurances of competition by seven crews, and the possibility that the record of nine contestants would be surpassed.

Definite starters are the representatives of the five member colleges, Columbia, Cornell, Penn, Navy and Syracuse; California, which won its third consecutive title in 1935, and Washington, third in that memorable race.

An eighth probable starter is Princton. Wisconsin, which has not rowed since 1931 when the Badgers were eighth and last, and Massachusetts Tech are other distinct possibilities. This would make a flotilla of ten, surpassing the record of nine set in 1929 and equaled in 1931.

Besides there are the outside possibilities that Rutgers and Marietta might try their luck over the gruelling 4-mile course stretching between Bluepoint and Crum Elbow.

The stewards definitely decided to invite the winner of the Marietta regatta, which will be held on the Ohio River early in June. Probable contestants in this event are Marietta, Rutgers, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Manhattan and Rollins.

C. U. Defeats Emory-Henry, 36 to 25; Maryland Wins, 55 to 33

Lieb Is Star In Cardinal Triumph

Captain Gets 12 Points; Visitors Outclassed From Start.

By Dave Herman.

SOME dare-devil shooting by spidery-legged Bernie Lieb, captain; Hermie Schmarr, the versatile "Flying Dutchman," and raven-haired Sammy Pagano, and a stout defense by the entire Catholic University team enabled the Cardinals to trim little Emory and Henry College, 36-25, last night at the C. U. Gym.

The ubiquitous Lieb, a veritable will-o'-the-wisp, ran the Virginians ragged with his flashy shooting, feinting and dribbling, and poured 12 points into the hoops to pace the Cardinals to victory.

Ably aiding and abetting their star captain, the husky Schmarr, who throws the ball with bullet-like speed, chalked up 10 points, and Pagano, playing in some of his best form, scored four field goals. And Zeke Brown, Pagano's running mate at guard, contributed six markers.

Countiss Rivals Ace.

Emory and Henry, although outclassed from the start, presented a sharpshooter in its slender captain, Tasker Countiss, a rosy-cheeked boys from out of the hills of Southwest Virginia. Countiss counted six times, four of 'em being from way past the foul line. Thus did he tie Capt. Lieb for high point honors, and offer his team something in the way of consolation.

The Cardinals threw up such an airtight defense that the Wasps had to spend many precious minutes passing back and forth to one another in an effort to pull out the home sentinels.

But the Cardinals refused to budge, and the invaders were forced to parade out their long-range artillery.

Lead 21-15 at Half.

Meanwhile, Capt. Lieb and company sifted through the Virginians' first and second line trenches with compartive ease. From a 6-0 lead which Catholic gained in the first few minutes, it skyrocketed to 17-9, and then to 21-15 at the turn.

Countiss was responsible for his team's last 8 points—all field goals.

Georgetown Prep Bows to Rockville

In one of the season's most bitterly fought games, Rockville High nosed out the visiting Georgetown Prep quintet yesterday, 13 to 12, for its second victory over the Prepsters this year. The Rocks scored but 2 points in the entire last half, Gene Ochsenreiter's winning field goal, with 2 minutes to play, deciding the outcome.

Wild Scramble for Ball in School Series Battle

Bowlers Snap Two Season Records

TWO season records featured a night of heavy pinfall in the Columbia Heights League at the Arcadia drives. Ambassador Laundry set a new season game mark, shooting 658 with the aid of Johnny Anderson's 154 game. Anderson walked away with the individual honors, collecting a three-game total of 424. The fast-climbing Vincent Barbers smashed the former total pinfall record with 1,821.

Hessick Coal Co. continued to lead the league with an odd-game decision over Arcadia. Highway Engineers' bid for the No. 1 position was halted by the Vincent Barbers, the latter winning three games. Bovello Plumbers upset Logan Motor twice and Ambassador Laundry took two from Galligher & Huguley.

Norman Groff wrote his name in the duckpin hall of fame last night in the Lutheran Church League at Arcadia, establishing an all-time record game of 181. Groff's set was 409, second high of the season. His efforts enabled Luther Place to share team honors with St. Paul, the team rolling a 587 game and St. Paul a 1,654 set.

The Shamrocks continued to exert its superiority in the Washington Ladies League at the Recreation alleys, setting the Vee Bees down three games. The Columbians failed to gain on the pacesetters, dropping one game to the Colonials. Ruth Rothgeb's 138 game and 353 set for the losers was best for the night.

The Lucky Strike team whipped the Bee Quees twice and the Cardinals were on the long end of an odd-game decision with the Nomads.

Bethesda Upsets Blair Five, 24-20

Garnering a 7-to-0 lead in the first two minutes of play and holding its opponents safely for the remainder of the contest, Bethesda-Chevy Chase won Montgomery County's "crucial contest" for the fourth consecutive year yesterday, defeating Montgomery Blair, 24 to 20, at Silver Spring.

Eastern Swamps Roosevelt; Central Beats Western, 28-26

By John R. Vosburgh.

LIKE the music in the song, Eastern High's basketball champions went 'round and 'round yesterday at the Roosevelt gymnasium and came out with a 62-to-33 victory over Roosevelt's Rough Riders. The few Eastern followers present could have contributed the rest of the song and chorus.

The champs evidently took a cue from the Rough Riders, for they gave one of the most impressive exhibitions of rough riding the inter-high series has ever seen. Not that the game was exceptionally rough physically, but it was plenty rough on Roosevelt in a scoring way.

Eastern scored a point every 30 seconds. Considering the time the opposing team must have had the ball, a team which scores 62 points must score about a basket every half minute it had the ball. To many observers it looked even oftener. At one point the champs ran off 15 straight points while Roosevelt was being held pointless.

Dean Gets 22 Points.

Capt. Lavelle (Dope) Dean sank 22 of the points, all of them from the floor. The lackadaisical Lincoln Parker gave a striking individual display of marksmanship which would have made Daniel Boone or Annie Oakley green with envy. Nobody counted how many shots he missed, but it is a safe bet that he took no more than 15 shots in all. Eleven of them swished through for baskets.

The victory was Eastern's third of the current series and its eleventh straight of the last two years. The decisiveness of the score, the complete, unhurried mastery which marked their play, further stamped the Lincoln Parkers as perhaps the finest team inter-high basketball has seen. The team in the series that can stop them is not in sight.

Roosevelt was figured to give the champs their toughest run of the series, in view of the Rough Riders' upset of Central and the fact that they would be playing on their own floor. For the first few minutes of play, they fulfilled predictions, but after taking a 7-5 lead were rapidly submerged by a rising tide of Eastern point-making.

Score At Half Is 31-14.

In the last three minutes of the first quarter, Eastern went to 11-7. In the second quarter, Eastern stretched the scoring streak to 21-7 before Roosevelt came back to make it 31-14 at half-time.

After making six baskets in the first half, Dean came back to sink five more. Reds Scheible, the all-high guard with the recently broken finger, dispelled all doubts of his recovery by rolling up 16 points, 12 of them in the last half.

There is not much more to tell about the game. Roosevelt was not playing actually poor basketball, by any means. But the way Eastern was clicking, any opponent would have appeared sadly outclassed. You have to see 'em to appreciate 'em.

Tow in Chicago 'White Hope' Tourney

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chicago, Jan. 21.—Bob Tow, heralded by Matchmaker Nate Lewis, of the Chicago Stadium, as a coming young heavyweight contender will not make his local debut until the first week in February, Lewis said tonight.

An opponent for the Alexandria, Va., fighter will be selected from among the winners in Friday night's battles, which are billed as part of an elimination contest to determine a white hope opponent for Joe Louis. Lewis said tonight that the stadium had wished to introduce Tow to Chicago fans earlier, but felt that he had not been in the best condition.

"Tow has beaten some boys that we like and has a good record," Lewis said. "He'll be in shape in another two weeks, and we want to show him to Chicago against a good opponent. He looks plenty good and should give the fans a show."

Tow has been absent from the ring for more than a year, suffering with a shoulder injury. His last bout was against Tony Galento, in New Jersey. Following that engagement, he was put on the sidelines with the shoulder injury and a few months ago was operated on at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore for the ailment.

Olympians Win.

The Olympian basketball team defeated the Merrick Boys Club, 32 to 26, last night, at the new Merrick gymnasium. The Merricks took a 20-to-12 lead in the first half, but the second half found the Olympians gradually whittling it down to go on and win.

Rival Players Have Six Ways To Lose Point in Table Tennis

AS hosts to the country's foremost table tennis players, who will exhibit their wares in the American zone championships in Tech gymnasium a week from next Thursday, it seems altogether fitting and proper that Washingtonians should have more than a casual acquaintance with the game.

The two extremes of pongists are the Pete-Swattem and the Joe-Gettem types, the former group being given to speed and more speed regardless of proficiency, and the latter class contenting itself with desultory, afraid-to-take-a-chance steadiness. Although there are sand-faced, cork-faced plain-faced, etc., paddles, it is estimated 99 per cent of the better players use rubber-faced racquets.

Tennis grips have definitely replaced the old penholder grip. The reason is obvious after reading the recent statement of Avery Brundage, former president of the Amateur Athletic Union: "Twentieth century table tennis differs from the anemic nineteenth century variety as black differs from white. It has acquired a new vitality and virility that accounts for its growing popularity."

Aside from knocking the ball into the net or outside, there are four ways of losing a point in table tennis—first, if you or anything you wear touches the net or its supports; second, if you move the table during the course of a rally; third, if your free hand touches the table, and fourth, if an "out" ball strikes your racquet even though the ball has passed beyond the end or side of the table.

A ball which strikes the top edges and corners of the table is good but if it strikes the side of the table-top below the edge it is a lost point for the last striker. And if a player drops his racquet he cannot return the ball with his empty hand. Also, a player is not allowed to throw his racquet at the ball under any circumstances.

Contrary to popular belief, the American Zone Championships is not the same as the National Championships. Bespectacled Abe Berenbaum, of New York, holds the national title, but the American Zones affair will be defended by Jimmy McClure, a 17-year-old lad from Indianapolis.

The players who show to best advantage during the American Zones will be sent at the expense of the U. S. T. T. A. to the World Championships in Prague next March.

Baltimore U. Old Liners' Victim

Frosh Fighters Subdue Fork Union Team by 5-3 Score.

UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND athletes did a brisk business at the old stand last night as the varsity quintet steam-rollered over an important University of Baltimore five to a 55-33 victory, while the freshmen boxing brigade spanked Fork Union's mittmen, 5-3, in an entertaining show at Ritchie Coliseum.

Bernie Buscher was the man behind Maryland's biggest gun in the court fray, contributing 20 points to the rout of Baltimore, not so closely followed by Waverly Wheeler with 12 and Vic Willis, who added 10. The winners led at halftime, 29-9.

2,500 Are Happy.

Hostilities developed a rich vein of humor in the second half as members of both teams slid, skidded and moved about the court in most unorthodox style. It resembled a tumbling act combined with comic opera more than anything else. But the 2,500 fans seemed to enjoy it.

Maryland's yearling boxers, coached by Lyman McAboy, who is a product of the Harmony school of ring rhythm, easily outclassed the gallant but woefully inexperienced Cadets. The difference between the two was larger than the final score indicates.

Caras Owes Much To Cue President

Jimmy Caras, 25-year-old Wilmington, Del., youth, and newly crowned pocket billiard champion, who will give a demonstration at Woodward & Lothrop's Friday afternoon, owes much to C. A. Storer, president of the National Billiard Association.

Impressed by the youngster's possibilities about four years ago, Storer entered him in the Eastern sectional qualifying tournament, which he handily won. Caras then went on to reach the final round of the world championship in 1932.

A match has been arranged between Caras and Lean (Masked Marvel) Yonders at the Earle parlor, 403 Eleventh street northwest, at 4:30 p. m. Friday.

Roselli and Play Chance Win

Each Leaves A Favorite In Wake

Finisher, Wedding Ring Combine to Return $167.50 Double.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

HILEAH RACE TRACK, Jan. 21.—The two divisions of the Delray Purse featured today's program at the track beautiful and the two races were won in like fashion by J. C. Palmer's Roselli and George D. Widener's Play Chance. Both 3-year-olds came from behind under slashing ride tactics and each left a favorite in his wake. Roselli ran the mile route in 1:37 1-5 to pay a $7.50 mutuel as compared to Play Chance's 1:38 3-5 time and $12.30 pay-off. Jockey Nick Wall rode a very consistent race on Roselli. He brought the gelded son of Traumer out of the mile chute in second position, but eased him back when Kendall Green and Trebor insisted upon running their legs off in a battle for the pace-setting honor. Approaching the stretch, Wall again asked Roselli for speed and the colt responded under punishment gradually to wear down and then to draw away from Trebor and a fast-closing War Games. Roselli had a length advantage at the wire.

Play Chance, carrying the light weight of the second division, was a dull-running sixth when the field came into sight. Three horses gained the lead during the first six furlongs. First, The Hare showed the way, then Reaping and finally Gallant Gay. However, Apprentice Jockey M. L. Fallon gave Play Chance a shaking up at the stretch turn and the colt began the drive that was to carry him to victory.

Gallant Gay might have triumphed had not Jockey Jimmy Stout, leading rider here, suffered a slight mental lapse. He began to ease up with about 100 yards to go and when he heard Play Chance moving up, the boy couldn't rally his mount sufficiently to withstand the ultimate winner's rush.

Hialeah Park, Miami, Fla., Jan. 21.

Dear Al:

A slight correction was made today on yesterday's seventh race but, of course, the action came too late to help the betters. Through somebody's mistake, Pass Shot, the winner, failed to carry enough weight and F. W. Hannon, trainer of Jezreel, the second horse, protested. The stewards announced today that Pass Shot had been disqualified as far as the purse is concerned, and the other horses were moved up a notch. Goldey F., the little filly that won here the other day, is considered the best of the juveniles to show here so far. She cost Mrs. W. A. Bridges, her owner, only $175. Jack Westrope, the jockey champion of 1933 with 301 winners, arrived today from California and will ride here as a free lance. He does 107 pounds. Hal Price Headley is enthused over the recent race of Whopper, and, although his trainer frowns on the long trip across the country, the big horse may be shipped to the Santa Anita Handicap. Goose Goslin saw today's program from a box in front of the press row.

BILL.

First race — Lord Tournament packs 120 pounds in this sprint but his recent form has been such that I'm forced to lean toward him. Runs coupled with Miss Trophy, one that has a chance in her own right. Armful, in with only 100 pounds, may down Wee Wink for the place award.

Second race—Tale of Woe, a recent winner, should score in this field. Sonny Workman is likely to do the saddle work. Albino and Patti will be ready if the top one makes mistakes.

Third race—Swamp Angel, one that we became acquainted with in Maryland, carries top weight in this mile test and deserves the call. Jackfull is of the improving sort and will be prominent. Speed for the show.

Fourth race—Scotch Gold has become something of a sensation hereabouts. Meets stern opposition tomorrw but comes off an impressive victory. Clocker Mike says Dancing Doll is due to awaken. Polish Beau should make a money appearance.

Fifth race—Zay's last must be thrown out. This one can and will do a lot better. Breaks off the rail here and we may see the speed turned on. Little Dinah, winner last out, will be in the thick of it. Bright Haven, at 116 pounds, is dangerous.

Sixth race — Relativity, Lone Hand and Mixed Party is the order that I prefer here. Madeley will have the saddle assignment on the first named and I see no reason for mistakes.

Best bet—Scotch Gold.

COL. BIXER	111	4	4	3^h	4¼	6	6	6	Landolt	55.80

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROSSELLI, $7.50, $3.50, $3.20; TREBOR, $4.20, $3.10; WAR GAMES, $4.20.

ROSSELLI, nicely handled, was taken back off the pace when TREBOR and KENDAL GREEN were rushed along rapidly in the first six furlongs, moved up smoothly when challenging the leaders approaching the home stretch, wore down the pacemaker and came out gradually at the close. TREBOR was rushed off his feet to get into the lead while obtaining room on the inside when reaching the back stretch, showed nice speed while setting the pace, but had little left when the winner challenged.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,100; allowances. The Del Ray (second division). For 3-year-olds; colts and geldings. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:28. Off at 4:30. Winner, George D. Widener's ch. c. (3), by Chance Play—Liseuse. Trained by Wilbert F. Mulholland. Value to winner, $775; second, $175; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:38 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PLAY CHANCE, $12.30, $6.20, $3.70; GALLANT GAY, $5.80, $3.70; CAPTAIN JINKS, $3.10.

PLAY CHANCE, saving ground after being slow to get into full racing stride, secured racing room between horses when moving up entering the home stretch, swung to the outside of GALLANT GAY, then closed fast to get up right at the finish. GALLANT GAY, on the outside of the leaders early, ran down THE HARE and REAPING, saved ground, but weakened during the closing furlong.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:57. Off at 5:03. Winner, Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' b. or br. f. (3), by Big Blaze—Beatitude. Trained by Hirsch Jacobs. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:47 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—AURA, $12.40, $5.80, $4.20; MUSCLE IN, $3.80, $2.60; SWEET SUSAN, $5.10.

AURA, outrun until reaching the back stretch, moved into contention readily in the last five furlongs, wore KRONA down nearing the home stretch, drew clear, but had to be shaken up strongly to stall off MUSCLE IN. Latter had good speed to move into the lead going to the first turn, fell back while being strongly ridden, then came to the outside when making his run and finished determinedly. SWEET SUSAN went in the thick of contention all during the running and held on willingly under a severe drive.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:31. Off at 5:32½. Winner, B. Hernandez' ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LAW MAKER, $70.60, $24.90, $9.90; SEAWICK, $3.80, $3.30; FUSCO, $4.40.

LAW MAKER, going in his best form and an admitted factor in the early racing, took a slight lead in the last five furlongs, withstood a tedious drive willingly and barely lasted long enough to outstay SEAWICK. Latter was rated nicely until challenged, saved ground, and continued subbornly until the close.

On The Air Today

OUT in Cincinnati is a manufacturing concern making, among other things, office supplies. I know because I have received a letter relating in full details the superlative advantages of a paper clip.

It's the clip that has become the emblem of the Onyx Club's "Round and Around Club" and all its subsidiary clubs. The story dates back to the earliest days of the "Music Goes 'Round and Round'" craze. The New York representative of the company received an order for 3,000 clips from Mike Riley.

Then came immediate orders for 10,000, and even 50,000. Utterly intrigued by such an enormous demand for paper clips from an admittedly one-horse night club, the salesman investigated and learned that his company's product had been selected for the "Round and Around Club's" insignia.

In a short time girls were wearing the clips as necklaces and bracelets. Sheet music was being sold with a clip attached.

It all began as a joke, this paper clip idea to a song, but the company is selling them by hundreds of thousands—and not a one being used for filing papers!

Mary Livingstone's absence from Husband Jack Benny's show last Sunday night was her second on the air in four years. A lot of last-minute rush work resulted in the introduction of Mamie, Mary's sister, as an emergency device. Mamie is Blanche Stewart, an old-time vaudeville friend of Jack's, who has been living with the Bennys in Hollywood. Mary will be back next Sunday night.

Every once in awhile something really different pops up in the motion picture theater. And here's one for the book. Beginning Friday, the Fox will present WRC's Timekeeper, Gordon Hittenmark, four times daily in an off-stage report of late news, conveyed to the Fox audiences through the house public address system. The newscasts will follow the showing of the newsreel and will become a permanent part of the Fox program. Now that is an innovation.

Aside to O. M.: The reason Ozzie Nelson's playing of the song was interrupted one night and not stopped a few nights later probably was because he had not obtained permission to play it the first night, but had the other night. Because of present copyright difficulties, some stations are arbitrarily taking off the air all tunes about which the management is uncertain.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, Jan. 21 (AP).—(U. S. Department Agriculture).—Sales were rather slow in the Boston wool market. Scattered transactions were reported and sales included fair quantities of a number of grades. Prices generally were very firm and in some cases higher than previously reported in recent weeks. Strictly combing 56s, ⅜ blood and 48s, 50s, ¼ blood, graded Ohio and similar fleeces realized 42 cents in the grease on this market.

Wage Scales Average Above NRA Standard

Slight Rise in Working Hours Held Due to Better Business.

New York, Jan. 21.—There has been no widespread tendency to cut wages, to increase hours of work, or to lay off employes since the national industrial recovery act was suspended last May, according to an analysis by the National Industrial Conference Board.

Payroll records of about 2,000 manufacturing plants in 25 industries, which employ more than a million workers, shows that hourly earnings and employment in October, 1935, were above those of April, the last month of NRA, and that the average working week was less than two hours longer. Much of the increase in hours reflects better business conditions, and in many industries the work was still below the maximum set by the codes.

In 17 of the 25 industries, average hourly earnings were higher in October than in April; in seven industries they were less, and in one industry they were the same for the two months. Among the seven industries in which hourly earnings declined, in only one was the decline more than one cent. In 18 of the 25 industries, the average hours of work per week were higher in October than in April, in five they were lower, and in the other two there was no change.

Months Compared.

To present a more exact picture than is possible with the use of averages, the conference board made a special analysis of the reports on wages and hours from 1,196 concerns, employing 733,700 workers in October, from which reports had been received for April and October. For each of these concerns average hourly earnings and average hours of work per week were computed for both months.

In 545 companies, employing 284,500 workers in October, average hourly earnings in October were lower than in April, but in nearly 100 of them in April, but in nearly than half a cent. In 606 concerns, employing 430,400 workers, average hourly earnings in October were higher, but in early 100 of these, also, the increase was less than half a cent. In the remaning 45 companies, which employed 18,800 workers in October, average hourly earnings were the same for the two months.

Average hours per week were higher in October than in April in 786 concerns employing 436,400 workers, but in 66 of them, the increase was less than half an hour a week. Average hours per week were lower in 369 concerns, employing 269,600 workers, and in 57 of these, the change was less than half an hour. In the other 41 concerns, average hours worked per week were the same in October as in April.

Stocks Lose Activity and Move Irregularly Lower With Foreign Trading Suspended.

New York, Jan. 21.—Closing of London markets and shortening of trading on American commodity exchanges acted further to reduce the trading volume in the stock and bond markets here, although no selling on that account was noticeable. Turnover in stocks fell short of 1,500,000 shares and price movements were mixed and narrow. Bonds also were slack, but pressure continued on the Government list.

Lacking anything to arouse fresh interest, the stock market acted much as it has for the past few days. A few stocks moved far enough out of the rut to attract attention. Cuban American Sugar, after moving up to the best price since 1929, broke sharply on disappointment over failure of the management to announce a plan for payment of dividend arrears. The shares had gained 19 points in a little over a week. Owens Glass recovered an early loss of 2 points. A lift in the dividend from $4 to $5 a share, yearly rate, was announced after the close of trading yesterday.

Railroad shares were irregularly lower. Santa Fe moved forward a point. Southern Pacific and Pennsylvania were firm. Jersey Central dropped 4 points on one sale. Others were a little soft. Silver stocks dropped a point on the average. The gold group was quiet, with the exception of Dome, which climbed a point to a new high price.

Airplanes were buoyant. Douglas crossed 60 for the first time since listing. Wright advanced into new high price areas and United was active. Traction stocks were busy and moderately higher. Motor accessories were firm. Manati Sugar common and preferred rose 50 per cent in value. Steel was firm.

Exchange Markets Open.

Foreign exchange markets were open abroad, the London banks remaining open. Trading was moderately active under the circumstances and anxiety over the dollar seemed to be great enough to give even the franc a firm tone. Sterling was little short of buoyant, and Canadian dollars were strong. However hopeful we may be over the bonus bill on the point that it may not bring inflation, passage of the measure, and the expected signing by the Executive, is looked upon with open eyes by foreign observers. In this country even many opponents of the measure think of it as just another two and a half billions of debt, which in itself is a sad reminder of the times.

Not many years back, when the national income was much greater than it now is, a billion dollars was regarded as a lot of money for a taxpayer to dig up. Moreover the piling of two or three billions to the debt would not a few years ago have been thought possible without grave disturbances to an unconvertible currency. Those considerations aside, the former service men certainly are as much entitled to their billions as are the dogs of Memphis, Tenn., to their shower baths and as are the coyotes in Montana to electrically lighted coulees and prairies, to be supplied by billion-dollar dams.

Commodity market trading was dull and the ending came early. Prices were inclined to stiffen. May wheat at Chicago closed unchanged at 100⅛ cents a bushel. Cotton rose 4 to 7 points.

Business.

Commodity exchanges—cotton, wheat and others—here and abroad were closed for all or part of the day as payment of respect to King George V. The Toronto stock market remained open, with announcement that it would be closed on the day of the funeral. Other parts of Canada were less eager for business. Although the Chicago Board of Trade (wheat) and the New York Cotton Exchange closed early, the New York Stock Exchange continued open for such business as it could get. In recent weeks, at least, it is likely that London trading has been about as great an influence on the New York stock market as have the Liverpool cotton and wheat markets on trading in this country. At any rate, the extreme slackness of dealings in stocks today could not be passed off as wholly domestic fatigue.

Precedent.

The New York Stock Exchange has ample precedent for sympathetic closing with London. In 1910 it closed part of the day at the death and at the funeral of Edward VII, as it had closed in 1902 for his coronation. It closed for the funeral of Queen Victoria in 1901. Stock markets here at those times were influenced by British trading to a larger extent than they now are, but it is doubtful if that was the moving consideration for closing.

Deposits.

Demand deposits in the banks consistently expand. With the increase of $97,000,000 this week (for member banks in 101 leading cities) the total now is nearly $2,250,000,000 higher than a year ago, when it already was beginning to attract adverse comment because of the potentialities for inflation. The deposits are perhaps mostly business money, but they are spendable money for the most part. This week the banks added largely to their Government direct and guaranteed bonds, using the influx of cash that had gone into circulation at the year end. Bank loans were stagnant as ever, emphasizing the fact that the banks have become little more than Treasury feeders.

Excess Reserves.

After the Federal open market committee met with the Federal Reserve System's board of governors last December 17 and 18 it stated that it had studied the recommendation of the Federal Advisory Council that excess reserves be reduced, and that the problem of excess reserves would continue to have "the unremitting study and attention of those charged with responsibility for credit policy, in order that appropriate action may be taken as soon as it appears to be in the public interest." The open market committee with the approval of the board still has the power to act and will have until its successor committee is appointed under the new banking act, in February, but it is unlikely that it will embarrass its successor by doing anything. Yet it is now stated that so many things have happened, including the President's budget message, the passage of the bonus, various Supreme Court decisions, with some signs of expanding use of bank credit, that the committee wants to meet again in pursuance of the promise to do so implied in its statement made last December. The open market committee is made up of the governors of the 12 Reserve Banks.

Money Rates.

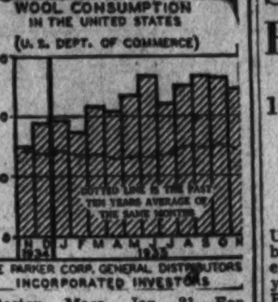
Wool Consumption Expanding Rapidly



Boston, Mass., Jan. 21.—For five months of 1935, from July through November, 137 per cent more wool was used in United States mills than in the corresponding 1934 months, while November consumption exceeded a year ago by 85 per cent. The wholesale prices of woolen and worsted goods increased 10 per cent during the year.

Wheat Unchanged In Small Trading

Chicago, Jan. 21 (AP).—In a restricted volume of trading, believed the smallest on record, wheat prices today hovered around $1 a bushel and registered no important change. Complete suspension of grain dealings at Liverpool and Winnipeg, because of King George's death, largely eclipsed other factors.

Wheat, after fluctuating in notably narrow limits of but 368 of a cent, closed steady, unchanged to ⅛ lower, compared with yesterday's finish; May, 1.00 to 1.00⅛; corn, ⅛ to ⅜ down; May, 59⅞ to 60; oats, unchanged to ¼ higher, and provisions varying 2 cents decline to an equal gain.

Sales of Diamonds Best in Seven Years

London (AP).—Diamond sales in various centers are rising, and the outlook for the year is considered by experts to be good. Leading diamond circles in Amsterdam express optimism regarding the industry, says the Financial Times Amsterdam correspondent.

Sales of cut diamonds during 1935 have been larger than at any time since 1929, and it is estimated that sales of rough stones exceeded those of 1934 by 100 per cent. Activity in the cutting industry has also increased.

All-Time Peak Set Last Year By Cigarettes

1935 Production Exceeds All Records by Nine Billions.

Cigarette manufacturers in the United States in 1935 produced nine billion more cigarettes than had ever been turned out in any one year prior to that time, according to Bureau of Internal Revenue figures issued yesterday.

Beginning with July, each successive month established a new record high for that period, concluding with a rise to 9,840,823,290 cigarettes in December, compared with 9,209,839,473 in December, 1934. This huge total for December—normally a quiet month—put the total for the year up to 134,607,741,257 cigarette, the first time in the history of the industry that over 130 billion have been produced, and comparing with 125,611,688,759 in 1934, the previous record year.

December and February in 1935 were the only months in which output failed to exceed the ten billion mark, February because of the fewer working days and December because most factories close down after Christmas and remain idle until after New Year's Day.

Cigar production eased off slightly in Decmeber, amounting to 312,973,813, against 317,563,442 in December, 1934. Despite this moderate setback, however, the year closed with cigar output well above that recorded in 1934.

	1935.	1934.
Cigarettes	134,607,741,257	125,611,688,759
Cigars	4,763,883,947	4,597,198,548

Culbertson on Bridge

Hairline Decisions.

"A hair perhaps divides the false and true." Omar hardly could have had in mind the decisions that bridge players are called upon to make, but nevertheless he stated a fact that may well be regarded as a bridge aphorism. Particularly in the selection of an opening lead, the most infinitesimal consideration may tip the scale one way or the other. But it is this consideration of minutia that distinguishes the great player from the merely good.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 heart	Pass	2 clubs	Pass
2 hearts	Pass	2 no trump	Pass
3 no trump

(final bid).

Many players, on lead with West's Yarborough, would figuratively close their eyes and play the card nearest their thumbs. But this West was made of sterner stuff. Hhe thought!

One thing was certain: his partner must have a pretty good hand, otherwise the bidding would have at least approached a slam. In order to establish and be put in the lead for the cashing of either of his five card suits, West would have to find his partner with at least four cards in the one opened. Superficially, a decision to lead spades was persuasive on the theory that if either of the adversaries had four spades he would have shown the suit at some stage, but this was not nearly so significant as the actual basis for choice—namely, that East could have bid one spade over one heart, but would have had to bid two diamonds—with the vulnerability, a much more dangerous procedure.

On this reasoning alone West chose the three of diamonds as his opening lead. It proved the declarer's Waterloo. One of his diamond stoppers was taken out immediately and, in clearing the club suit, the other was removed. Before he could win a single spade trick the diamond suit was established for three tricks, which, with the spade ace and a club trick, defeated the contract.

U. S. Financing Reported Topic Of Reserve Unit

Market Committee Studies Needs Rising From Bonus Action, AAA Ruling.

Problems involving future Government financing, resulting from the imminent passage of the bonus bill and from the AAA decision by the Supreme Court, were reported to have been discussed yesterday by representatives of the 12 Federal Reserve Banks, constituting the open market committee of the Reserve System.

Described by Reserve Board officials as a purely routine meeting, the session is believed to have weighed the effect of such financing on the selling by banks of Government securities. Members of the board agreed not to reveal the nature of their discussion.

Neither Secretary Morgenthau nor Undersecretary Coolidge conferred with the bank representatives. Coolidge usually attends the meetings. It was stated the committee made no recommendations to the Reserve Board.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt said at a press conference that he expected to name the new Federal Reserve Board within the next two or three days. His announcement followed a visit to the White House of Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia, who discussed with him the personnel of the new board.

"Exception" by Glass.

"With one exception," Glass said, "I think the President is going to name a pretty fine board."

Glass did not name the exception, but his opposition of Marriner S. Eccles, who is slated to be reappointed chairman of the board, is well known.

Other members reported to have been selected tentatively are M. S. Szymczak, of Chicago, a member of the present board; Joseph P. Broderick, a former New York superintendent of banks; Ronald Ransom, vice president of the Fulton National Bank of Atlanta; Joseph H. McKee, chief bank examiner of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and William Trufant Foster, a professor at Harvard.

The meeting of the open market committee was the last one of the organization as at present constituted. After February 1, when the Federal Reserve Board will be reorganized, the committee will consist of the members of the board and only five bank representatives. The session was unannounced, although at the Federal Reserve offices it was said the meeting had been arranged in December when the committee held what then was generally believed to be its last session under the present setup.

$2,000,000,000 Needed.

One of the principal problems of Government financing arises from the bonus bill, which is certain to become a law. The bill will require the borrowing of more than $2,000,000,000. In addition, the Treasury must refund $1,246,000,000 of maturities before the end of the present fiscal year, June 30.

The necessity for heavy financing is expected to require the co-operation of the Federal Reserve Board in maintaining an easy money situation. This condition is expected to make difficult, or to eliminate altogether, any action to reduce excess reserves of the member banks. The committee has power to cut down reserves only by the sale of Government securities.

Treasury officials are concerned particularly about bonus financing. Advocates of the "baby bond" provision, which was written into the Senate bill and which probably will be in the final law, have insisted that this will save the Government a considerable outlay of cash immediately. The Treasury, however, has no possible way of ascertaining how many veterans will cash their bonds immediately and how many will hold them. This means that there must be cash on hand to meet a maximum demand. The bonds will be redeemable beginning June 15.

all terms for the primary, even to picking the arbitration committee that handled complaints from the polls.

John Klorer, spokesman for the Long headquarters, forecast an easy victory at 8:30 p. m.

"This vote is a repudiation of President Roosevelt and a vindication of Huey P. Long's program," he said.

Unprecedented swarms of voters still were lined before polling places in New Orleans at 7 p. m., regular closing hour, and election officials amended the rule to let all within the barriers cast their ballots.

Precinct commissioners were authorized to set up make-shift booths if they could find the materals.

Fraud Charged.

An arbitration committee was set up to handle complaints from the polls. Gov. Allen named the arbitrators, contrary to the usual custom of letting both sides choose them. Dear's anti-Long ticket withdrew at noon when the arbitrators refused to let them make records of the complaints.

Portests, telephoned to the arbitrators, included:

That city employes were being compelled to show how they marked their ballots; one person was voting several times in the same precinct; Long election commissioners were giving voters ballots already marked; anti-Long commissioners were being barred from the polls; ballot boxes were hidden from official watchers; citizens were intimidated and refused the right to vote; Long workers were ganging up at polling booths; Long officials refused to count their blank ballots before the polls opened; locks were missing from ballot boxes; citizens were voting in the open in one precinct, with Long leaders helping mark ballots; liquor was flowing around several booths.

The widowed Mrs. Huey P. Long cast her vote in the old family precinct. She drove to the booth in an automobile, accompanied by a woman friend.

The Congressional committee appointed "watchers" for many polls, and 26 of their officials were ejected from polling booths at Lake Cahrles by force.

U. S. Is Ready To Force Rail Co-ordination

Eastman Report Says Government Pressure Is Arranged.

By the Associated Press

Transportation Co-ordinator Joseph B. Eastman said yesterday he has laid the foundation for the application of Government "pressure" to compel railroad co-ordination.

Discussing a policy of promoting co-operation, co-ordination and gradual unification, Eastman said in his annual report that difficulties in the way of collective action are so great "that outside pressure from governmental authority is a very necessary ingredient."

"The groundwork has been laid by the co-ordinator and his staff for the application of such pressure from now on in steadily increasing degree," he continued.

The report revealed conflict between the views of Eastman and the Interstate Commerce Commission on the co-ordinator's proposal to reorganize the I. C. C.

Eastman also called for establishment of his office on a permanent basis, extension of I. C. C. authority over water carriers and the provision of the dismissal compensation for employes displaced by co-ordination.

Such a program, he said, would necessitate reorganization. He suggested membership be increased from 11 to 16, with one member as a co-ordinator and five as a central "control board."

In a letter accompanying the report, the I. C. C. said that such a reorganization "would not be in the interest of efficiency or economy and should not be made."

Side-stepping direct expression on the proposal to make the office permanent, the commission added that with Eastman's past reports before it "Congress is well advised as to whether or not the office should be made permanent."

Inquiry Asked In Bethlehem's Merger Plans

Rich Requests Cummings to Reveal Details in Program.

By the Associated Press.

Justice Department officials said yesterday Representative Rich (Republican), Pennsylvania, had asked Attorney General Cummings to investigate certain reported consolidation plans of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation.

Rich furnished the department yesterday with a list of other concerns, officials said, which he stated Bethlehem planned to take over. Officials declined to make public the list.

The request was referred to John Dickinson, Assistant Attorney-General in charge of the anti-trust division.

Rich has called for stricter enforcement of the anti-trust laws on the House floor, asserting mergers were contemplated between the Sharon Steel Hoop Co., of Sharon, Pa., and the Pittsburgh Steel Co. He cited the Republic Steel Corporation's recent acquisition of the Corrigan-McKinney Steel Co., the Truscon Steel and the Gulf State Steel Companies.

Rich said the Bethlehem Steel Corporation had called a meeting of its stockholders for February 26, contemplating a move to "throw off the holding company cloak and become an operating company."

"This would mean a great, large corporation with hundreds of millions of dollars capital," Rich stated. "The object of this merger is to defeat the income tax laws."

Rich said the Bethlehem Corporation also is trying to "take over the Williamsport Wire Rope Co." by "paying $700 for each $1,000 bond."
